WELCOME MESSAGE FROM THE HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT

The Student and Faculty Handbook, taking into account our New Programme of Study, is a map of the academic activities and endeavours in which you are invited to participate. This is a “flow chart” which presents the conditions, terms, commitments, options and possibilities that structure your Programme, during these four years. As students of the Department of Philosophy, you are required to meet these conditions, pay attention to your commitments, make your choices, and take advantage of the possibilities. All of us, the staff of the Department of Philosophy, congratulate you on your success and cordially invite you to a fruitful cooperation. There is no need to say that your scholarly progress is our major concern, but it cannot be achieved without your hard work, your eager and continuous participation and your open-mindedness.

Qua activity, philosophy is the way to a meaningful life, through the effort of critical thinking. Qua knowledgeable training, philosophy is the prerequisite for the ability to share this effort with your fellow men, by teaching the youngsters and, hopefully, writing about these issues of human interest, that is, being thrown into the battle over ideas. You must not forget, in the words of Isaiah Berlin, that “when ideas are neglected by those who ought to attend to them – that is to say, those who have been trained to think critically about ideas – they sometimes acquire an unchecked momentum and an irresistible power over multitudes of men that may grow too violent to be affected by rational criticism”.

So, the years of your studentship is your chance – and, from now on, our common duty – to prove that human thinking cannot be limited to the operations of a computer, and that the treasures of human thought are safe, and continue to be augmented.

Welcome aboard!

The Head of the Department

Vana Nicolaidou-Kyrianidou
Professor of Political Philosophy

I. THE N.K.U.A. AND THE DEPARTMENT OF PHILOSOPHY

CHAPTER ONE

1. THE N.K.U.A. AND THE SCHOOL OF PHILOSOPHY

1.1 The N.K.U.A.: foundation, operation and administration

The National and Kapodistrian University of Athens was founded in 1837 and its denomination was initially “Othonian University”. It was the first University not only in Greece, but also in the Balkans and in the whole region of the Eastern Mediterranean. In 1932 it was renamed into “National and Kapodistrian University of Athens” (N.K.U.A.) and this new denomination persists until today. It is a Legal Person of Public Law, completely self-administered according to the current legislation, supervised by the Ministry of Education and Religious Affairs and subject to the provisions of Public Law.

The N.K.U.A. is currently comprised of 9 Schools and these in turn have 43 Departments in which Programmes of Undergraduate and Postgraduate Studies are run and organized. The minimal duration of study in most of the Departments is 8 semesters. The institutionally provided administrative organs of the University are the Senate, the Rectoral Council, the Rector and the Vice Rectors.

1.2 The School of Philosophy and the Library of the School of Philosophy

1.2.1 The School of Philosophy: foundation, operation and administration

The School of Philosophy was one of the first four Schools of the University. Its initial denomination according to the founding decree of 1836 was “School of General Sciences” while in the correcting decree of 1837 the name “School of Philosophy”, which finally prevailed, appears for the first time. In 1904 it was split into two separate schools, the School of Philosophy and the School of Physics and Mathematics. Today the School of Philosophy includes 13 Departments, all of them offering Undergraduate Programmes of Studies. In all Departments there are also Postgraduate Programmes of Studies, with some of them being run under the common participation of different Departments of the NKU University or of separate Academic and Research Institutions. The School of Philosophy as a whole also includes the unified Library, 4 Museums, 24 Laboratories and 12 Research Centres. An Interdepartmental Programme for the Teaching of Greek as a Second / Foreign Language, which includes a specialized Postgraduate Programme of Study and the Modern Greek Language Teaching Centre, belongs also to the School of Philosophy.

The School Council or Dean’s Council consists of the Dean, the Heads of all the Departments, 2 elected representatives of the students of the School and 3 further elected representatives, one for each of the other categories of the laboratory and teaching staff of the School.

1.2.2 The Library of the School of Philosophy

The unified Library of the School of Philosophy is housed from 2019 in a new building beside the east side of the School (in front of the main entrance). The Library consists of 16 singular Libraries that served the needs of the Departments of the School of Philosophy, as well as the Interdepartmental Programme for the teaching of Modern Greek as a foreign language and the Teaching Centre of Modern Greek as a second/foreign language.

- At the beginning of each academic year, regular tours for the students are organized in the Library of the School of Philosophy, with the aim of making them familiar with its contents and the way it provides its services.

2. ORGANIZATION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF PHILOSOPHY

2.1 Foundation of the Department

2.1.1 Foundation and Orientation of the Department

The study and research of philosophy were the primary concerns of the founding decree of the School of Philosophy, which in the “Provisional Regulation” (1837) was named “School of Philosophy and of the other circular education”. The decree of 1837 provided for the appointment of a full professor of Philosophy, a position held by Neophytos Vamvas, who also became the first Headmaster of the School of Philosophy. Since then, Philosophy has incessantly been cultivated at the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens. In 1984 the until then “Philosophical Department” became the “Sector of Philosophy” in the then newly established Department of Philosophy-Pedagogy-Psychology. After the complete division of this Department (preceded by the foundation of an independent Department of Psychology in 2013) in 2019 an independent Department of Philosophy emerged, which is the natural successor of the older Sector of Philosophy.

The new Department of Philosophy of the N.K.U.A. was established by Law 4589/2019, article 16 (Government Gazette 13 / A / 29.01.2019). It admitted students for the first time in the academic year 2019-2020. The mission of the Department is the promotion and cultivation of philosophical thought through research and teaching, the training of competent scientists in the research and teaching of philosophy, as well as their thorough scientific training for their scientific and professional career and development. Also, the goal of the Department is to contribute to the cultivation of philosophical and humanistic education in general. The Department of Philosophy offers: (a) Undergraduate Programme of Studies, (b) Postgraduate Programmes of Studies (1 Programme with three specializations, 1 Interdepartmental and 1 Interinstitutional Programme), (c) Doctoral Studies, and the opportunity for (d) Post-Doctoral Studies.

2.1.2 Accreditation of the Undergraduate Programme of Studies of the Department

The Evaluation and Accreditation Council of the National Authority for Higher Education (NAHE) has certified by decision (no. 35915 of 27/06/2023) that the Undergraduate Programme of Studies in Philosophy of the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens fully complies with the principles of the Quality Standard of the Undergraduate Program of (NAHE) and the Quality Assurance Principles of the European Higher Education Area (ESG 2015) for level 6 of the National and European Qualifications Framework.

- Validity of the Certification: five years, from 12/06/2023 to 11/06/2028.

2.1.3 Career prospects for graduates

The graduates of the Department of Philosophy are included into the subcategory of teachers (abbrev. PE02) eligible to teach philological lessons at the Schools of the Secondary Education (article 16, paragraph 5 of Law 4589/2019).

- Secondary Education: They can take part in the Panhellenic Competitions organized by the Central Authority (ASEP) in order to be appointed in the Public Secondary Education. They can also be hired in the Private Secondary Education.

- Public and private sector organizations: They also have opportunities, according to the existing provisions, to find occupations in the public and private sector such as ministries, public services, prefectures and local governments, in state and private cultural institutions and organizations, in institutions developing educational and cultural activities, in communication and information media, publishing houses, companies, research institutes, as well as in the wider field of culture as executives, consultants and trainers in objects of their specialisation.

- Academic career after obtaining a doctoral degree: Graduates of the Department have the opportunity to continue their studies at postgraduate and doctoral level and can, upon receiving a doctoral degree, pursue an academic career, i.e. work in higher education (universities) and in relevant institutions (research institutes, centers of scientific studies etc.) belonging to the public and the private sector.

2.2 People in the Department

2.2.1 General information

The Department during the current academic year has 15 members of Teaching and Research Staff (D.E.P.), 3 members of Laboratory Teaching Staff (E.DI.P.) and 1 member of Specialized Technical Laboratory Staff (E.T.E.P.). Also in the Department 1 scientific collaborator is teaching according to special assignments; 2 secondary school teachers are seconded to the Department. The Personnel of the Secretariat of the Department consists of 4 employees. It is estimated that after the enrollment of the new students in the present academic year, about 900 undergraduate and postgraduate students will belong to the Department during the winter semester 2023-2024.

2.4 Administration

The administrative bodies of the Department, according to the current legislation, are the General Assembly and the Head of the Department. The General Assembly consists of the members of the Teaching and Research Staff (T.R.S./D.E.P.), one representative of the members of the Laboratory Teaching Staff (L.T.S./E.D.I.P.), one of the members of the Specialized Technical Laboratory Staff (S.T.L.S./E.T.E.P.) and of one representative respectively of the undergraduate and the postgraduate students of the Department.

II. STUDIES: A' CYCLE OF STUDIES

CHAPTER THREE

3. UNDERGRADUATE STUDIES

3.1 General Information

The Department's Programme of Undergraduate Studies leads to the acquisition of a BA degree ("ptychion") in Philosophy. The duration of studies is four years. The modules are organised and allocated on the basis of 8 semesters. The completion of studies through the acquisition of the Philosophy Department's BA degree requires attending and successful examination in 51 modules. The undergraduate studies contain

- (a) attending compulsory and optional modules,
- (b) participation in seminars and
- (c) writing a diploma thesis [c1]
 - or undertaking a traineeship (in a research structure, via the Partnership Agreement [PA/"ΕΣΠΑ"] or not) [c2]
 - or attending two additional modules and a seminar [c3].

All relevant regulations are contained in the Regulations of Undergraduate Studies, which have been revised by the 1st meeting of the Department of Philosophy's Assembly in the academic year 2020-2021 (11-9-2021) and has been in effect since the beginning of the academic year 2020-2021, simultaneously with the implementation of the revised Programme of Undergraduate Studies. The new Regulation for Undergraduate Studies is listed below with the annexed changes according to Law 4957/2022.

3.2 Undergraduate Studies Regulations

CHAPTER A'

STRUCTURE AND TEMPORAL ARRANGEMENT OF THE PROGRAMME OF STUDIES

ARTICLE 1

First Cycle of Studies

1. The first cycle of studies consists of attending to the Undergraduate Programme of Studies, which contains modules that correspond to at least 240 ECTS credits and is completed with the award of the level 6 degree ("ptychio"/BA) of the National and European Organisation for the Certification of Qualifications & Vocational Guidance. Each academic year contains educational activities that correspond to 60 ECTS credits. The credits resulting from attending a foreign language are also included in the aforementioned ECTS credits.

2. The students are not allowed to register for the seminars of semesters 5, 6 and 7, if they have not been successfully examined in at least eight (8) compulsory modules of the previous semesters. The students are not allowed to write a diploma thesis or undertake a traineeship without having successfully completed at least two seminars (in effect for the students that were enrolled in the academic year 2019/20 and onwards).

ARTICLE 2

Duration of studies – Educational activities

1. The academic year begins on the 1st of September and ends on the 31st of August and the educational activities are distributed in two (2) academic semesters: the winter semester and the spring semester. The exact dates of the beginning and end of each semester are set every year by the University. Educational activities can be any of the following: a) the self-contained teaching of a module to a unified audience or to small groups of students, b) the co-operation between teaching staff and students during the teaching of seminars or modules, c) exercises in laboratories and in general the traineeship of students, d) the supervision of diploma theses and assignments, and e) the organisation of seminars or other equivalent activities that contribute to the better apprehension of the cognitive material offered to the students.

2. Each semester comprises at least of 13 full weeks. This time span is further specified by the Assembly's meeting before the beginning of each academic year. After the completion of the semester's teaching period follows the examination period, during which students are examined in the modules they were taught during the semester. Additionally, in September of every academic year, a repeat examination period with a maximum length of 4 weeks takes place, during which all the modules taught in the previous two semesters of that particular academic year are examined. The time length of the examinations is determined by the Internal Regulations of the University. Extension of a semester's duration is permitted only under extraordinary circumstances, in order for the required minimum number of teaching weeks to be completed. The extension cannot be for more than two weeks upon approval by the rector, after the recommendation of the School's Dean's office.

3. The students can enrol in the semesters, provided they fulfil the conditions for continuing their studentship according to the law.

4. The content of the programme of studies is approved by the Senate, following the decision of the Department's Assembly.

ARTICLE 3

Registration for course and semester modules

1. In the beginning of each semester, according to the deadlines announced electronically by the Department's Secretariat and separately for each kind of registration, (and which cannot be extended except for extraordinary cases in which case a decision with a specified explanation by the Department's Assembly is required), students must submit an electronic registration form which contains the modules from the programme of studies (compulsory or/and optional or/and seminars) that they plan to attend during the specific academic semester. In case these forms are not submitted, or submission takes place after the deadline, the student's participation in the module's examinations is forbidden. An electronic submission of a second registration form is also necessary with respect to the choice of a textbook from the Electronic Course Book Management Service ("Eudoxus" / "Εύδοξος"), for which a separate deadline is set by the Ministry of Education. Any omission of this form's submission does not prohibit the students from participating in the exams, but from the gratis acquisition of the textbook. While submitting this form, students choose books only for the modules they have registered, so that any unpleasant complications be avoided (e.g. obligation to send back the books, exclusion from the System of provision etc.).

2. From the winter semester of the academic year 2019/20 onwards, the Department's Assembly, prior to the beginning of each semester, determines the maximum number of participants in the seminars. In the seminars the number of students should not be more than 30. In any other case the Department's permission is required. The students declare their desire to pre-register for the seminars of the Philosophy Department (in the Secretariat of the Philosophy Department) during the week prior to the semester's beginning and are notified by the staff in charge, after the teaching staff's selection, regarding the existent possibilities concerning to the student's inclusion. Students of advanced semesters have always priority. The seminar convenor maintains an attendance record, which (s)he submits to the Department along with the semester's grades. A maximum of 2 absences is allowed. For more absences a permission from a public hospital is required. Students receive an essay's topic in the context of the seminar's theme. Its oral presentation – defence is optional. The grading is dependent on the presentation – defence, the active participation and the final submitted essay, whose length should not exceed 3.000 words, including introduction and bibliography. The essays are uploaded on a special section of the Departmental website, where teaching staff can control them for plagiarism.

The same seminar can be offered and taught by more than one members of teaching staff within the same semester.

3. In order to register for modules the following rules apply:

a) The maximum number of modules for which the students can register within a semester of regular study is ten (10).

b) The students are not allowed to select modules that according to the programme of studies are allocated to a semester advanced by more than 2 semesters with respect to the semester the student is enrolled. (For instance, a student enrolled in the 3rd semester can select modules only up to the 5th semester.)

4. The week before the beginning of classes of the 6th semester, students choose one of the following options concerning the 8th semester of studies:

a. writing a diploma thesis (between 9.000 and 12.000 words)

b. undertaking a traineeship in one of the Departmental laboratories or in another research unit (through PA, ATLAS or another institution)

c. additional modules (two) and seminar (one). In this case, in the 7th semester, the student must be successfully examined in two modules from group ΟΦ5 and in two modules from group ΟΦ6, instead of one from each group, which is the regulation holding for those that will choose versions (a) και (b). Furthermore, in the 6th semester, the student is required to successfully complete two seminars from group ΟΣ2, instead of one that holds for those choosing versions (a) και (b).

Every member of the teaching staff cannot undertake the supervision of more than five diploma theses per semester. The directors of the laboratories of the Department can assign up to ten traineeships per academic year. The members of teaching staff can refuse to undertake the supervision of a diploma thesis or traineeship, if they so choose.

Diploma theses are uploaded on a specific section in e-class, are controlled by plagiarism detector systems and are graded by a two-member committee after examination. The same holds for the deliverables of traineeships in the laboratories of the Philosophy Department.

According to current legislation, the Department delineates its Internal Regulations of Traineeship and determines the academic criteria for the assessment of the deliverables of the traineeship. According to its own Internal Regulations of Traineeship, the Departmental Assembly designates in each case one member of the teaching staff as “Academic Supervisor of Traineeship” for those undergraduate students undertaking a traineeship. After the completion of the Traineeship, the “Supervisor” examines the student orally or in writing, – taking into consideration the deliverables and/or the corresponding Reports of the institution providing the traineeship – and submits to the Departmental Assembly the grade that corresponds to the academic grading scale (0-10) with its corresponding ECTS credits, as they have been defined by the Assembly and as they are described in the Programme and the Student Guide of the relevant Department. Grading is accompanied by the deliverables and/or the Final Report of each Traineeship.

A Committee of annual tenure responsible for the BA diploma theses and traineeships and consisting of a D.E.P. (Teaching and Research Staff) member and two E.D.I.P. (Laboratory Teaching Staff) members is designated by the Head of the Department. The Committee gathers the requests for BA diploma theses and traineeships in the week prior to the beginning of spring semester of each academic year. Every student (of semester 6 or higher) must submit an application in hard-copy to the Departmental Secretariat in the week before the beginning of classes of his/her 6th semester of studies, mentioning the topic and the supervisor of the diploma thesis or of the traineeship, after having come into contact with the supervisor. A record is compiled with all applications and is publicly announced by the Department. The students whose applications cannot be satisfied, as well as those who will choose version (c), will be examined in additional modules/seminars.

No two students have the same topic. If such permission is granted due to a special reason, then the students are assigned a similar topic, but with a marked differentiation which will enable independent work (research and writing).

The BA diploma thesis is of a research nature and has as its goal the familiarization with the techniques, skills, undertaking of research, use of bibliography, analysis and evaluation of results. A modification of the title of the diploma thesis or traineeship can be done before its completion, if it is required during the course of research and its results.

Every BA diploma thesis and traineeship is uploaded and presented publicly, after its' announcement by a member of the teaching staff, in the Department's electronic portal and the announcements board. Every student is required to submit a copy of the diploma thesis to the responsible DEP/EDIP member and electronically to the N.K.U.A.'s platform "Pergamos" («Πέργαμος»). Submission to the Institutional Repository "Pergamos" or the Grey Library is accompanied by a relevant official document (from the Department's Secretariat).

5. During the writing of seminar assignments or of the diploma theses, the students must state in the appropriate scholarly manner, i.e. through bibliographic references, the use of a third party's work and views. The use of another person's work without the corresponding reference or the duplication of excerpts of someone else's work without clearly stating it, i.e. without the excerpt being put in quotation marks, forms plagiarism, and as a result leads to the assignment's / diploma thesis' rejection. In the case of plagiarism, the convenor of the seminar or the supervisor of the diploma thesis must notify the Assembly of the Department. In cases of repeated plagiarism by the same student the Departmental Assembly imposes his/her exclusion from the next examination period. If plagiarism is detected in a diploma thesis, this has to be re-submitted in the next semester.

ARTICLE 4

Student issues

1. Students are required to check the relevant announcements which are uploaded on the Departmental website, to take account of the Regulations and the Student Guide, as well as all informative material given to them, and must register in time in the module's webpage in e-class, so that they check the relevant information that a member of the teaching staff uploads.

2. "Erasmus" Programme

During their studies students have the possibility to attend modules in Departments at overseas Universities, with which the Department of Philosophy has co-operation via the programme of student exchange "Erasmus".

Calls for application to the "Erasmus" Programme are announced on the Departmental webpage, as well as a list with all the available Erasmus agreements. During that time, a meeting is set in order for students to be informed by D.E.P. member(s) that have been designated as co-ordinator(s) of the "Erasmus" Programme of the Department.

ARTICLE 5

Obligations of members of staff

1. The Vice Head (or a DEP member designated by the Departmental Assembly as advisor of studies) is obliged to receive the students and their nominated representatives at least once a week for an hour, for the sake of informing students regarding the system of studies that is established by the programme of undergraduate studies of the Department and its basic principles, the content and significance of compulsory modules, optional modules of various categories and seminars, the system of assessing knowledge that is established by law and the present Regulations, as well as to guide them through any problems that may arise during their studies. Additionally, the Department's Head is responsible for organizing the annual Welcome ceremony for welcoming and briefing all freshman students of the Department.

In addition, every year ten D.E.P. or/and E.D.I.P. members are designated as academic advisors of studies, in order to counsel the students. Students are allocated per each DEP member on the basis of the last digit of their student number and are notified via a relevant announcement announcement, which is posted on the Department's website.

2. In the beginning of the semester, members of teaching staff are obliged to create a webpage in the Platform of asynchronous remote education (eclass.uoa.gr) for the modules they will be teaching. In general, in the first week of teaching all members of teaching staff have the obligation to send to all students registered for their module a detailed syllabus with relevant bibliography. Additionally, they are required to upload on the platform of asynchronous remote education every accompanying material in support of the module they are teaching.

All members of teaching staff are obliged to keep office hours on specified days of the week, which are announced in the beginning of the semester, in order to address any educational and research issues. Office hours for teaching staff members cannot be less than two per week and must be allocated in two days.

CHAPTER B'

ORGANISATION OF TEACHING

ARTICLE 6

Time schedule and allocation of teaching

1. The time schedule of weekly teaching hours for every module, as mentioned in the Programme of Studies, must not be violated by the convenor, neither by absence nor by exceeding the number of weekly hours, except for cases of necessary substitution of teaching hours due to an unforeseeable cancellation.

ARTICLE 7

Evaluation on behalf of the students

Upon the completion of the 8th teaching week students are encouraged to participate in the evaluation of the members of teaching staff and of the courses. The evaluation is carried out by the Department's Group of Internal Evaluation ("OMEA"), which is formed by the Assembly according to the standards of the Quality Assurance Unity ("MODIP" N.K.U.A.). The results are presented to the Assembly in a quantitative and impersonal form twice per academic year. Personal information might be given upon request to a member of the teaching staff strictly on a confidential basis.

CHAPTER C' ASSESSMENT

ARTICLE 8

Assessment of students' performance

1. The assessment of students takes place through the final examination after the completion of the semester. Students are entitled to be examined in the modules for which they registered before the beginning of the winter semester, in September. These regulations hold also for the students in their final year.

ARTICLE 9

Final Examinations

1. The final examinations for each module are either written or oral and can be substituted with essay assignments or with two tests. The manner of the module's examination is stipulated by the module's convenor. Oral exams take can take place when the number of students to be examined in a module is not greater than 50. Regarding the materialization of the oral examination, the module convenor issues and uploads on the module's webpage a separate programme of oral exams containing the names of the students who will take part, as well as the hours of examination for each group. Each group cannot contain less than 3 or more than 6 students.

2. Apart from the stipulations of the foregoing paragraph, after the members of the teaching staff have checked each case with the Dean's office, are responsible for the oral examination of students with dyslexia in a separate examination. Proof of dyslexia or of serious mobility impairments or vision problems that essentially obstruct participation in written exams, is provided before the student's admission to the University, in order for a separate examination to take place according to the procedure determined by the Internal Regulations of the University. A D.E.P. member of the Department is designated by the Assembly as Responsible of Accessibility on a biannual tenure.

ARTICLE 10

Examination procedure

1. Specifically with regard to written examinations the following rules must be followed:

The written exam of each module lasts for two (2) hours. The Secretariat is in charge of timely uploading on the relevant webpage the general programme of the semester's oral examination, after it has been forwarded by the Office of the Dean of the School of Philosophy, which must contain, for each module, the day the exam is going to take place, as well as the time of beginning and end, for each one of the groups, in which the students are allocated. The module convenors have to be present in the place(s) where the exam takes place, to supervise its uninterrupted and unimpeachable realisation and take all necessary measures in order to realize this goal. Designated invigilators are in charge of inspecting the official N.K.U.A. evidence (student I.D.) which proves the student identity and verifies the identity of the person being examined, to ascertain the written display of the full name and the student identification number on the student's paper, to initial and number his/her paper, to continually invigilate the entry and exit doors, especially at the time when the exam ends and the students give their papers back, and to take care not to let anyone in or out of the examination room before a time period of thirty minutes (30'), after the announcement of the exam questions. Students can discuss the answers to the questions of the written exams with the module convenor after the announcement of the result and in a specifically allocated time; students have the right to see the exam paper of the current examination period.

The examinees have the right to ask the module convenor for clarification regarding the exam topics. These questions must be posed in public, not privately, to be directed exclusively to the module convenor and must be answered in public.

During the exam, the temporary exit of students from the examination room is allowed only under supervision or with the invigilator's accompaniment.

During examinations examinees are not allowed to have in front of them books, notes etc. or to use any device of electronic contact -except in the case these have been deemed necessary by the module convenor for the materialization of the examination's procedure. Breaching these prohibitions, as well as the copying from or talking/co-operating with other examinees will result into the student's failing the exam and may incur other additional sanctions, which will be decided by the Department's Assembly.

If the student fails more than three (3) times in the same course, he/she may request, upon his/her application to the President of the Department, to be evaluated by a three-member committee, which consists of members of the teaching staff of the same or another Department of the University with the same or related subject as that of the course to be examined, in which the instructor of the course may not participate.

If the President of the Department fails to appoint the members of the committee referred to in the first subparagraph within one (1) month from the submission of the application, the student may request the appointment of a committee by the Dean of the School. If no committee is appointed by any of the competent bodies within sixty (60) days from the submission of the request, the student submits his application to the Ministry of Education and Religious Affairs, which requires the Rector of the University to investigate into the non-implementation of the request. The evaluation by the three-member committee can take place at any time during the academic year.

In case of failure students can continue or terminate their studies according to the terms and conditions specified in the Internal Regulations of the University [L. 4009/2011].

ARTICLE 11

Grading – Award of degree

1. The module convenors are responsible in handing in to the Department's Secretariat the results of the final examinations, written and/or oral, all in the same table for each module, not later than twenty five (25) days after the completion of the exam. In the case of oral examinations the module convenor is not allowed to immediately announce the result of the exam to the students of each group, but only collectively for the total amount of examinees.

2. In all modules, seminars, BA diploma thesis/traineeship of the Programme of Studies, the result of the assessment is expressed arithmetically with grades from zero (0) to ten (10). In the tables of the results failure is denoted with the grades zero (0) to four (4), and pass with grades five (5) to ten (10).

3. During grading of an exam paper by the module convenor, a student is given an option to be classified as unsuccessful upon request, in case (s)he does not receive the grade he would desire. However, it is upon the judgement of the examiner if such a request might be taken or not under consideration.

4. Carrying a grade from one examination to another one is not allowed; the same holds for the announcement of the grade of a student who was examined in a different group to the one he belongs to, according to the alphabetical allocation of the module's teaching groups.

5. The way of calculating the grade of the award, qua study certificate, as well as the characterisation of the overall assessment of the student is stipulated by the legislation, as this is specified by the decisions of ADIP (Quality Assurance Authority) and MODIP. The degree's grade is the average of the grades of all modules that are required for the completion of studies, taking into account the weighting factor of every module. The weighting factor is determined by the ECTS credits that each module has. At least 240 ECTS are required for the acquisition of the degree.

Recognition of modules

The students admitted to the Department via Placement Examinations or transfer can have modules recognised that have been taught and in which they have been successfully examined at their Department of origin. For the procedure to take place, students must submit official documents proving the number of modules they have been taught and in which they have been successfully examined at their Department of origin. These documents are:

A. An application of recognition with the official proposed equivalency between the modules of the Department of origin and the modules of the Department of Philosophy.

B. An Academic Transcript and description of the modules taught at the Department of origin.

NB that the admission semester of students possessing a BA degree cannot be higher than the 5th semester. Via a decision of the Assembly of the Department receiving the student(s) those admitted can be exempted from the examination of modules or exercises of the Departmental programme of studies which they were fully taught at their Department or

School of origin. With the same decision, the admitted students are obliged to be examined in modules or exercises for which it is thought that, according to the programme of studies, they were not fully taught at the Department or School of origin. In any case, those admitted are exempted from the examination of modules in which they were examined for their placement, given that these modules correspond to the modules of the programme of studies of the Department receiving them.

Concerning transfer students admitted to the Department: recognition of modules, exemption from examination of the corresponding modules of the Departmental programme of studies and allocation to a semester other than the first takes place, in each case, according to the decision of the Assembly, after the proposal of the Committee of the Programme of Studies, according to the stipulation of the article 35 of L.4115/2013.

CHAPTER D'

ENROLMENT OF THE STUDENTS

ARTICLE 12

Enrolment of the First-year Students

The names of students admitted to the Department of Philosophy, according to the selection results, are communicated to the Department's Secretariat through special records from the Ministry of Education and Religious Affairs. The deadline for the students' enrolment is determined by the decision of the Minister of Education and Religious Affairs. The same enrolment deadline applies for students that are admitted without examinations, who belong to special categories (e.g. disabled etc.), and who exceed the overall number of entrants.

Student Identity

The student identity is acquired when registering at the Department and is maintained until the acquisition of the BA degree.

The maximum duration of study in a first cycle program of study with a minimum duration of eight (8) academic semesters for the award of the degree, can be increased by four (4) academic semesters. In a program of study whose minimum time exceeds eight (8) academic semesters, the maximum duration of study is the minimum study time, increased by six (6) academic semesters. After the completion of the maximum duration of study, subject to the following paragraphs [suspension of attendance and part-time study], the Board of Directors of the Department issues an act of deletion.

All provisions regarding the duration of study, the suspension of studies and part-time attendance are included in article 76 of Law 4957/2022.

CHAPTER E'
TRANSITIONAL AND FINAL PROVISIONS

ARTICLE 13

Force and implementation

1. In terms of the Programmes of Undergraduate Studies that were in effect before the academic year 2014/15, students who might fall under these terms simply maintain their possibility to be examined, and maintain their student identity as well, according to law. For the examination of the aforementioned students in the various modules, the following distinctions hold:

a) For those modules of the old Programme that are, according to the relevant decisions of the Assembly, the same in content as the modules of the revised Programme, the students participate in the regular examinations of the corresponding modules of the revised Programme.

b) For those compulsory modules of the old Programme that are not taught anymore, the Assembly has to decide and determine the examination of the student in similar modules (compulsory or optional) of the revised Programme, following the proposal of the academic in charge.

c) For those optional modules of the old Programme that are not taught anymore, the Assembly must decide following the proposal of the academic in charge, in order to determine the similar optional modules from the revised Programme, out of which the student will be able to choose, so that (s)he can replace the optional module (s)he owes from the old Programme.

4. PROGRAMMES OF UNDERGRADUATE STUDIES

4.1 General Information – Abbreviations

The Programme of Undergraduate Studies is available from the following link:

The above-mentioned Programme of Undergraduate Studies is presented below in its final form, as it was decided by the General Assembly of the Department of Philosophy (session of 10th April 2020).

Abbreviations

C	Compulsory Courses
CO	Compulsory Optional Courses Courses chosen among those offered within a certain field of knowledge or a category of courses.
FO	Free Optional Courses Courses chosen from any field of knowledge within the general Programme of Study.
TC	Teaching Credits The Teaching Credits correspond to the weekly teaching hours per course and semester.
ECTS	European Community Course Credit Transfer System ECTS is an index attributed to every course according to the amount of work that every student requires to do in order to successfully complete it. See below 4.2.1 (3).

4.2 Programme of Undergraduate Studies

4.2.1 Arrangement of the Programme of Studies

1	Courses The Programme of Studies of the Philosophy Department is, in the first place, structured in two levels: Philosophy courses and courses from other fields of knowledge (either offered by the Department of Philosophy itself, or by other Departments of the School of Philosophy or other Faculties), which support philosophical research and provide comprehensive education to graduates who intend to teach in the Secondary Education. Philosophy courses are divided into required and required elective ones. The required courses cover all branches of Philosophy, while the required electives are structured so that students can choose fields of specialization. In addition, the compulsory electives include seminars that cultivate primary and secondary research. In addition to the lectures and seminars, the Programme of Studies also includes teaching practice and dissertation / traineeship. With the first option, students are trained in teaching by teaching lessons in cooperating schools. With the second option, they are trained in primary scientific research, in the writing of a complete integrated scientific work and in the connection between research and practice.
2	Duration and completion of studies Eight (8) semesters constitute the minimum required duration of study in the Department of Philosophy. Each academic year comprises two semesters: one winter semester and one spring semester. Therefore, the Programme of Studies includes, in total, four (4) winter semesters and four (4) spring semesters. Each semester includes at least thirteen (13) weeks of teaching. The elective courses from the Department of Philosophy are taught during the 3rd and 4th year of study. For the successful completion of the studies and the acquisition of a degree from the Department of Philosophy, it is required to attend at least fifty one (51) courses and to gather at least two hundred and forty (240) ECTS-units. In addition, each course of the Department of Philosophy corresponds to three (3) Units of teaching. Both the Units of the Department as well as the ECTS corresponding to each course are awarded to students only after their successful examination in a certain course.
3	ECTS of the courses: general information The Programme of Studies of the Philosophy Department is fully harmonized with the European System of Credit Transfer and Accumulation (ECTS), as well as with the relevant Greek legislative framework (a. Law 3374/2005, b. Ministerial Order F5 / 72535 / B3-2006, Government Gazette 1091/10/08/06, vol. B, c. Ministerial Order F5 / 89656 / B3, Government Gazette 1466/2007, vol. B). The European Credit Transfer and Accumulation System (ECTS) is a student-centered system that serves the planning and recognition of Curricula and allows for a more homogeneous view of the education systems of European universities.

	The ECTS-credits corresponding to each course reflect the workload of the students that it is required in order to complete all the activities of the course, such as attending lectures, participating in workshops or seminars, preparation of essays and diploma theses, the use of university libraries for research and bibliographic information and, finally, participation in examinations.
4	ECTS-Credits of the courses of the Department of Philosophy
	In accordance with the current legislation (Ministerial Order F5 / 89656 / B3, Government Gazette 1466 / 2007) the ECTS-credits that every student needs to gather in order to obtain the Degree of the Department are as follows:
	CATEGORY	NUMBER OF COURSES	FIELD OF KNOWLEDGE	ECTS OF EACH COURSE	TOTAL ECTS
	C	16	PHILOSOPHY	5	80
	CO	6	PHILOSOPHY	4	24
	C	3	PHILOSOPHY	9	27

	FO	2	A SELECTION FROM ANOTHER DEPARTMENT	3	6
	C	1	DIPLOMA THESIS OR TRAINEESHIP	17	17
		TOTAL: 51			244
5	Foreign Languages
	The foreign languages offered by the Department of Philosophy are as follows: -the English language, -the French language, -the German language, -the Spanish language and -the Italian language.
6	Participation in the Erasmus+ Programme

	Students have the right to study or do a traineeship (Placement) either at a Higher Education Institution abroad or at a European or international scientific organization with full academic recognition respectively, through their participation in the Erasmus + Programme. The ECTS-credits, as well as the grades of the courses attended by the students taking part in the Erasmus+ Programme are determined by the Foreign Universities offering the courses. Any credits acquired abroad are subsequently integrated in the Students' Programme of Studies, after their recognition and assignment.

4.2.3 Remarks

1	Preconditions for (a) registration in seminars and (b) submission of a diploma thesis or completion of an traineeship Students may not register in the seminars of the 6th, 7th and 8th semesters if they have not been successfully examined in at least six (6) of the required courses of the previous semesters.
----------	--

	Students may not compose a diploma thesis or undertake a traineeship without having successfully completed at least two seminars (applies to students admitted from the academic year 2019-20 onwards).
2	Operation of seminars The number of students in the seminars should not exceed thirty (30). In any other case permission of the Department is required. The students declare their wish to pre-register for the seminars of the Department of Philosophy (to the committee appointed by the Assembly), following a relevant announcement on the Department's website, the week before the beginning of the semester courses and are duly notified, according to the selection of the Convenors, about the available chances and their inclusion in the participants of the seminars. Students of senior semesters always have priority. The Convenor keeps a record about the presence of the students, which he / she submits to the Department along with the list of their grades. Up to 2 absences are allowed. More absences presuppose permission from a public hospital. The students undertake a work topic within the framework of the seminar. Oral presentation and defense of the work are compulsory. The rating is the result of the presentation and defense of the work, the overall active participation and the final written text, the length of which should not exceed 3,000 words, including the introduction and the bibliography. The works are uploaded on a designated area of the Department's website and are checked by plagiarism detection systems under the responsibility of Convenors. The same seminar may be offered and taught by more than one Convenors in the same semester.
3	Options for the 8th semester of study: preparation of a diploma thesis / realization of a traineeship / additional courses and seminar In the week before the start of the semester courses, students of the 8th semester choose one of the following options available to them: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a. preparation of a diploma thesis (from 9,000 to 12,000 words); b. undertaking of a traineeship in one of the Laboratories of the Department or in another research institution (through NSRF, ATLAS or other institutional bodies); c. additional courses (two) and seminar (one). In this case, in the 7th semester, students should successfully be examined in two courses belonging to the GPH5 group and in two courses of the GPH6 group, instead of one course from each Group, which applies to those students who choose options (a) and (b). Also, in the 6th semester, students of this category will have to successfully complete two seminars from the GS2 group instead of one, with the latter applying to students who choose options (a) and (b).
4	Diploma theses and traineeships: Supervision and evaluation, presentation and posting Each member of the teaching personnel cannot supervise more than five diploma theses per semester. The directors of the Laboratories of our Department can assign up to ten traineeships per academic year. Teaching staff members may not undertake the supervision of diploma theses and traineeships if they so wish.

The diploma theses are posted to a special zone of the e-class, they are checked by plagiarism detection systems and graded after examination by a 2-member committee. The same applies to the deliverables of the traineeships in Laboratories of the Department of Philosophy.

The Department, in accordance with the current legislation, creates the Internal Regulations for traineeship at the Department and determines the academic criteria for the evaluation of the deliverables of the traineeship. The General Assembly of the Department, in accordance with the relevant Internal Regulations of traineeship, appoints in each individual case one Teaching Staff member as “Academic Supervisor / Supervisor of the traineeship” for the undergraduate student trainees. At the end of the traineeship, the “Supervisor” examines orally or in writing the student – taking into account the deliverables and / or the respective Reports of the employer – and submits to the General Assembly of the Department the appropriate rating in the academic grade scale (0-10) with the corresponding ECTS-credits, as they were determined by the Assembly and are mentioned in the Programme of Studies and the Studies Guide of the Department involved. The rating is accompanied by the deliverables and / or the Activity Report of the respective traineeship.

The Head of the Department appoints an annual Term Committee, in charge of the diploma theses and traineeships, consisting of a member of the Academic Staff and two members of the Laboratory Teaching Staff (E.D.I.P.). The Committee collects the requests for the diploma theses and traineeships in the week before the beginning of the spring semester of each academic year. Every student (from the 6th semester onwards) must submit during the week before the beginning of the courses of the 6th semester of his / her studies, a printed application to the Secretariat of the Department, stating the subject and the supervisor of his / her work or traineeship, after first consulting with him / her. A list of all applications is compiled and publicly announced by the Department. Those students whose applications are not approved and those who choose option (c), are examined in more courses / seminars.

It is not allowed that two students have the same subject. If this is required for special reasons, then the students undertake similar subjects, but with a distinct differentiation that makes independent work and independent writing possible.

The diploma thesis is research work aimed at learning techniques, conducting research, the use of literature, analysis and evaluation of results. A modification of the title of the diploma thesis or the traineeship may be done before its completion, if required by the course of the research and its results.

Each diploma thesis and traineeship is posted and presented publicly, after the respective announcement by the supervisor, on the electronic platform and on the bulletin board of the Department. Every student must hand over a copy of the work to the supervising staff member and submit it electronically on the platform “Pergamos” of the N.K.U.A. The submission to the “Pergamos” Platform or Gray

	Library is accompanied by a relevant document (from the Secretariat of the Department).
5	Good practices considering writing seminar papers or diploma theses When writing their seminar papers or diploma thesis, students have the obligation to report in the appropriate scientific way, i.e. through bibliographic references, the use of the work and the views of others. The use of third party work without proper reference or the transfer of excerpts from this work without making it explicit, i.e. without placing the quote between quotation marks, constitutes plagiarism, resulting in the work being rejected with the lowest mark. In case of plagiarism, the convenor of the seminar or the supervisor of the diploma thesis is obliged to inform the General Assembly of the Department. In cases of repeated plagiarism by the same student, the Assembly of the Department may impose an exclusion from the next examination period. If plagiarism is found in a diploma thesis, the work is resubmitted next semester.

4.4 Expected learning results of the Programme of Undergraduate Studies

The courses of the Programme of Undergraduate Studies provide students with the foundations required for their being able to meet the contemporary scientific demands, securing thus their capacity to be employed in a wide variety of jobs.

Completing their studies, the students of the Department of Philosophy are expected to have acquired the following skills and knowledge:

- scientific specialization in the area of philosophy;
- interdisciplinary skills and knowledge in the area of humanities;
- experience in writing and presenting scientific essays, as well as collaborating for assignments and research;
- the knowledge required for teaching philosophical and other humanistic courses and seminars in public and private educational and cultural institutions;
- the knowledge and skills required for continuing their studies at a postgraduate level in Greece and abroad in the area of philosophy (theoretical and applied) and more widely in the area of humanities;
- the skills required for undertaking scientific research according to the international standards of research.

4.5 Correspondence of modules from the A', B', C' and D' year of studies for the students admitted up to and including academic year 2018-2019

The equivalent modules of the A', B', C' and D' year of studies for the students admitted up to and including academic year 2018-2019 are included in the Greek version of the Student and Faculty Handbook. They are also posted on the Department's website.

6. DESCRIPTION OF PHILOSOPHY COURSES

6.1 Description of philosophy courses at the Department of Philosophy

1st SEMESTER (WINTER)

Code: 73ΦΛΣ200	TC: 3	ECTS: 5	Category: C	Hours: 3
-----------------------	--------------	----------------	--------------------	-----------------

Module Title	Ancient Greek Philosophy II: Plato
Module Convenor	V. Nicolaidou-Kyrianiidou
Description	This course introduces Plato’s philosophy and explores its place in the history of ideas. First, will be examined the “Priority of definition” in the Socratic Dialogues. Next, issues concerning Plato’s theory of Ideas will be considered. This exploration will include controversies between Plato’s essentialism and Aristotle’s term for universal “Universals”, as well as the nominalist opposition to platonic “really beings”. Topics to be discussed include the ontological status of sensible objects, the distinction between knowledge and opinion, the relation between soul and body, and the importance of mathematical Ideas for understanding the relationship between the intelligible and the sensible world.

-----------------------	--------------	----------------	--------------------	-----------------

Module Title	Logic I
Module Convenor	E. Triantafyllou
Description	The course’s subject is focused on propositional and predicate logic. The aim is to familiarize students with the basic methods and concepts of logic. Content: Arguments. Validity and soundness, logical fallacies. The forms of propositional logic. Truth tables. Tautologies and contradictions. The law of excluded middle, the law of non-contradiction. Relations of logical equivalence, contradictoriness, and contrariety between sentences. Trees for propositional logic. The forms of predicate logic. Domain and scope of a quantifier. Quantifier-negation interactions. The square of opposition. Tree rules for quantifiers. The concept of identity, Leibniz’s laws. Tree rules for identity. Russell’s theory of descriptions. The course is expected to develop the student’s ability to distinguish between valid and invalid forms of argument, to offer a level of familiarity with the basic concepts of logic, to promote rigor in the use of language and in reasoning.

----------------	-------	---------	-------------	----------

Module Title	Theory of Knowledge
Module Convenor	G. N. Politis
Description	What is the precise meaning of the term “knowledge”? What do different theories claim about possibilities and preconditions of the attainment of valid knowledge? The establishment of knowledge in Ancient Greek Philosophy. Idealism and Empiricism. Learning as recollection and learning through the senses. Distinction between scientific and philosophical knowledge. Issues of modern and contemporary theory of knowledge in the way they are posed by scientism, historicism and analytical philosophy. Vienna Circle and falsifiability. “Scientific Revolutions” and “anarchistic epistemology”. Postmodernism, irrational knowledge and nonsense.

2nd SEMESTER (SPRING)

Code: 73ΦΛΣ203	TC: 3	ECTS: 5	Category: C	Hours: 3
----------------	-------	---------	-------------	----------

Module Title	Ancient Greek Philosophy III: Aristotle
Module Convenor	E. Perdikouri
Description	This course introduces the students to the basic principles and fundamental questions of Aristotle's philosophy. After a general introduction to the life and work of Aristotle, to the adventures of the Aristotelian corpus and the immense influence of this corpus in the history of thought, the course is divided into four sections: the theory of the categories – the question of scientific knowledge – the science of being – the faculties of the soul. In the first section we study the Categories and examine the basic forms of predication as well as the concepts of primary being, secondary being (species, genus), differentia, proper and accident. The second section focuses on the examination of the Posterior Analytics and the problem of what constitutes scientific knowledge. We examine the scientific syllogism, the necessary criteria for science, the objects of scientific research and the issue of first principles. The third section turns to the Physics and the Metaphysics , correspondingly Aristotle's second and first philosophy. We examine Aristotle's criticism of Plato's theory of Ideas, the concepts of particulars and universals, substance and quiddity, the pair matter-form, as well as the theory of causality which includes the four explanatory causes and the pair potentiality-actuality. The fourth section examines the new conception of the soul as the principle of living beings put forward by Aristotle in the De Anima , the theory of the faculties of the soul and the three levels of potentiality and entelechy. The conclusion of the course will leave the students familiarised with the basic aristotelian concepts, and capable of studying the texts of Aristotle as well as recognising aristotelian notions and questions in later philosophers.

Module Title	Byzantine Philosophy
Module Convenor	G. Arabatzis
Description	This course sets out with the examination of the epistemological presuppositions of the Byzantine Philosophy, which as a branch of the History of Philosophy was developed later than all the others and was actually established by the work of B. Tatakis La philosophie byzantine , published after WW II. The reasons for this delay are being examined in relation to the problem of the renewal of the philosophical education and the research programmes contained in it. Then a focus is put on the problem of periodization of the Byzantine philosophy, especially the determination of its beginning as well as the proper characterization of its particular historical periods. In this context special emphasis is placed upon the classical Byzantine era (10 th – 11 th centuries) as a continuation of the thought developed during the prior period of iconoclastic controversy and in defense of the ontological status of the icons. Moreover, the problem and the role of the Byzantine intellectual are studied within a consideration of a concrete philosophical institution.

Code: 73ΦΛΣ205	TC: 3	ECTS: 5	Category: C	Hours: 3
-----------------------	--------------	----------------	--------------------	-----------------

Module Title	Medieval Philosophy
Module Convenor	G. Steiris
Description	The course focuses on aspects of Medieval philosophy, Latin and Arabic. The course aims at the reception of ancient Greek philosophy by Latin and Arabic scholars and its blending with Abrahamic religions. Firstly, the students are introduced to the limits and limitations of this reception. Moreover, they examine critically the arguments for the existence of God. Furthermore, they study texts that address the issue of free will. Lastly, the problem of the universals and its implications is examined.

3rd SEMESTER (WINTER)

Code: 73ΦΛΣ206	TC: 3	ECTS: 5	Category: C	Hours: 3
-----------------------	--------------	----------------	--------------------	-----------------

Module Title	Metaphysics
Module Convenor	G. Iliopoulos
Description	The aim of the course is to make the students familiar with basic concepts and fundamental questions of metaphysics as a crucial, complex, and special field of philosophy. Starting from the way Aristotle established the "First Philosophy" in his Metaphysics , the next steps consist in attempts to reconstruct the content of the relevant approaches and critical positions, as they are to be found in the works of the major philosophers of, a. the Greek antiquity (early, classical, Hellenistic and late), b. the Christian Middle Ages, c. Modern Times (Descartes, Spinoza, Leibniz, Locke, Berkeley, Hume, Kant, Fichte, Schelling, Hegel, Schopenhauer, Feuerbach, Marx, Nietzsche), d. the twentieth century (Bergson, Husserl, Heidegger, Wittgenstein, Whitehead, Merleau-Ponty). Upon completion of the course, students are supposed to have acquired basic knowledge of the history of philosophy, focusing on persons and currents; they will also be able to critically reconstruct this knowledge on their own, as well as to develop the connections between particular problems and positions that fall under the broad field of metaphysics.

Module Title	Modern European Philosophy I: Rationalism and European Enlightenment
Module Convenor	I. Prelourentzos
Description	This Modern Philosophy course focuses on the study of the main features of Rationalism, with prime representatives being Descartes, Spinoza and Leibniz, and of the Enlightenment: French, German and British, especially Scottish. Subjects of great significance on the fields of method, ontology, epistemology, mind-body theory, as well as themes of moral and political philosophy will be thoroughly examined. The importance of the philosophical study of emotions will be highlighted. The course aspires towards an understanding of the main problems faced by the philosophers of that particular period in the context of, on one hand, the Scientific Revolution, with the prevalence of a mechanistic approach of nature, and on the other hand the intense debates regarding religious issues after the Reformation. The role of the peculiar revival of ancient Greek philosophical theories in a Christian environment will be co-examined. Upon completion of the course, students will be familiarized with the positions on fundamental areas of thought of the most prominent philosophers of the 17 th and 18 th centuries, and will have understood the influence they exerted on the theoretical debates of the following centuries and still exert to this very day.

-----------------------	--------------	----------------	--------------------	-----------------

Module Title	Modern European Philosophy II: Empiricism
Module Convenor	M. Pangalos
Description	Taking the philosophy of René Descartes (1596-1650) as a starting point (Discourse on the method, Meditations on First Philosophy) our aim will be to examine the crucial points of the itinerary of empiricism through the Western thought. Stations of this itinerary are the philosophies of Bacon, Hobbes, Gassendi, Locke, Berkeley and Hume. At its point of arrival we will also encounter the “new” empiricism of Rorty as well as the attempts made by Ch. Taylor and A. MacIntyre to refute it while at the same time they nevertheless retain a certain concept of “experience”. We hope that in this way it will become obvious that the rightly understood empiricism does not coincide with naturalism and is not confined to the truth of sensual impressions. In this direction, we shall examine also the thought of E. Anscombe and of I. Murdoch.

4th SEMESTER (SPRING)

Code: 73ΦΛΣ209	TC: 3	ECTS: 5	Category: C	Hours: 3
----------------	-------	---------	-------------	----------

Module Title	Ethics
Module Convenor	P. Pantazakos
Description	The aim of the course is to offer an overview of the moral theories of philosophers from the emergence of ethics as an autonomous philosophical discipline in the time of Socrates and the Sophists in classical Athens to the present days. The course extends to two levels: firstly, to cognitive theory, hedonism, virtue ethics, self-preservation principle, deontology, utilitarianism, intuitionism, secondly, to one where metaethical approaches as emotivism, prescriptivism, descriptivism, the revival of virtue morality, situationism and consequentialism are discussed. At the same time, the course examines issues such as the relations between Ethics and the other philosophical disciplines: Metaphysics (evidence of God's existence, religion and ethics, the 'death' of God), Ontology (egoism, evolutionary theory, gene determinism), Epistemology (cognitive skepticism-moral relativism, false consciousness, fanaticism, fundamentalism) and Aesthetics (beauty and the good). Finally, the interdependence of Ethics, Political and Social Philosophy is examined, as well as the relationship between Science and Ethics.

Module Title	Modern European Philosophy III: Kant
Module Convenor	I. Trisokkas
Description	The module belongs to the domain of Modern European Philosophy and covers various topics in Immanuel Kant's (1724-1804) "critical philosophy." The module's objective is the understanding of the problems that occupied Kant's thinking, of the solutions he proposed, as well as of the systematic character of his philosophy. Emphasis will be given to the "transcendental aesthetic" and the "transcendental analytic" of the Critique of Pure Reason , which is Kant's magnum opus and one of the most important texts of European philosophy. Upon the completion of the module, students will have familiarized themselves with the theses and arguments of Kant's critical philosophy, especially of the Critique of Pure Reason , will have acquired the ability to converse about them with a philosophical audience, and will have understood their great significance for the development of European philosophy.

----------------	-------	---------	-------------	----------

Module Title	Political Philosophy
Module Convenor	V. Nicolaidou-Kyrianidou

Description	This course aims to study the political thought of the eighteenth century, especially through the tension between liberalism and republicanism. Particular attention will be paid to Montesquieu's political theory. It will focus on issues such as the nature and the principle of government with respect to the tradition of Natural Law, and the types of governments. Next, the separation of powers will be discussed, considering the rupture brought about by the philosophy of the seventeenth century with the classical tradition. Topics include Montesquieu's notion of political virtue in comparison with both ancient political philosophy and Machiavelli.

Module Title	Social Philosophy
Module Convenor	G. N. Politis
Description	Social philosophy in relation to adjacent philosophical disciplines. Subdivision of social philosophy into its inward and outward paths. Principles of liberal philosophy. From classical liberalism (Hobbes, Locke and Mill) to contemporary viewpoints (Rawls, Nozick). European social democracy and "neoliberalism". The principles of socialist philosophy. The inversion of Hegelian dialectics and the historical materialism of Marx. Economism and authoritarian socialism. Epistemological and ethical criticism of Marxian and Marxist conceptions. Libertarian socialism and the itineraries of Non-Marxist socialism. From Bakunin's classical anarchist philosophy to Cornelius Castoriadis' conception of autonomy and to analytical Marxism.

Module Title	Contemporary Philosophy I: Continental Philosophy
Module Convenor	G. Kakoliris
Description	The course focuses on a multitude of contemporary continental philosophers, in particular those in that current of thought that is referred to as 'poststructuralism', which has developed since the 1960s. Some of the philosophers examined are Jacques Derrida (1930–2004), Michel Foucault (1926–1984), Giorgio Agamben (1942), and Judith Butler. (1956). Particular emphasis is placed on political and moral issues elaborated in their work, which will allow students to understand that philosophy is not limited exclusively to solving purely theoretical problems, but actively engages in critical reflection upon issues related to the existing politico-social reality. Upon completion of the course, students will know the work of important contemporary thinkers whose work is at the heart of philosophical thought today. They will also know the novelties that post-structuralism brings to philosophical thought, as opposed to the phenomenological tradition and structuralism, two traditions with which poststructuralism critically converses.

Module Title	Contemporary Philosophy V: Positivism – Logical Positivism
Module Convenor	S. Iliopoulou
Description	The subject of this course belongs to area of contemporary philosophy. Its general aim is the critical examination of various versions of positivism. Our starting point will be the views of August Comte, who is regarded as the founder of this theory. We will next discuss logical positivism as put forward by the ‘Vienna Circle’ (in connection with the way the Circle interpreted L. Wittgenstein’s Tractatus). We will also examine A. J. Ayer’s Language, Truth and Logic , a work highly influenced by Viennese logical positivism. We will give emphasis on positivists’ views about the subject and method(s) of philosophy and about its relationship to science. We will finally discuss certain issues concerning the influence of positivism on analytic philosophy today. As a result of successfully completing this course it is expected that students: a) will be familiar with the main arguments for and against various versions of positivism, b) will be aware of the consequences of adopting a positivist position concerning the subject and method(s) of philosophy and c) will be in position to form a personal informed opinion about positivism.

Module Title	Ancient Greek Philosophy IV: Socratic Schools – Hellenistic Philosophy
Module Convenor	E. Perdikouri
Description	Hellenistic Philosophy includes the Schools founded after the death of Aristotle in 322 B.C. and dominate the philosophical discussion till the definitive edition of the aristotelian corpus around 50 A.D. The course is divided into three parts: Epicurus and the Epicureans — the Stoics – Pyrrho and the Sceptics of the Academy. The theories of each School are examined in the order of the standard division of the areas of philosophy during that period: Logic (Dialectic and Theory of knowledge) – Physics (Ontology, Cosmology, Metaphysics, Psychology) – Ethics (Ethics and Politics). The course examines the terms and conditions that differentiate Hellenistic from Classical Philosophy. Despite their differences, the Hellenistic Schools share some important views: the insistence on the question of knowledge and the effort to establish a practical philosophy capable of leading people to happiness. We examine the central epistemological problem of this period, namely the question of the possibility of knowledge. The two "Dogmatic" Schools, the Epicureans and the Stoics, abandon the thorough or implicit ontological dualism of their predecessors, proposing instead two central monistic positions: that only bodies are beings and that perception is true. These positions are criticised by the Sceptics within the polemics concerning the “criterion of truth”. The course studies in depth the cosmological, ontological and psychological monism of the Epicureans and the Stoics. Finally, we examine the ethical theories of the Hellenistic Schools, theories that constitute a sort of therapy for human misery, leading thus to ataraxia and apatheia . The conclusion of the course will leave the students familiarised with the basic concepts and central issues of Hellenistic Philosophy, and capable of pinpointing the theories specific to each School as well as the influence exerted by them in the subsequent philosophical tradition.

Module Title	Ethics and Technology
Module Convenor	E. D. Protopapadakis
Description	The technological revolution, alongside the many and varied benefits it brings to everyday life, also comes hand in hand with intense moral dilemmas. These are either old, which technology makes more salient and sharp, or entirely new. We will follow the debate on some of these, always focusing in an analytical way on the arguments put forward. To this end, we will analyse texts that encapsulate the relevant debates, many of which are considered reference works for contemporary ethical thought.

Module Title	Modern Philosophy IV: German Idealism
Module Convenor	I. Trisokkas
Description	The module belongs to the domain of Modern European Philosophy and focuses on Georg Hegel's (1770-1831) Phenomenology of Spirit. This work is of great importance for Hegelian philosophy because it answers the question "what should be the beginning of philosophical inquiry?" It is also important for post-Hegelian philosophy, as it exerted considerable influence on such major philosophers as Kierkegaard, Marx, Heidegger, Sartre, and, more recently, McDowell and Brandom. The module's objective is the understanding of the problem the text aspires to resolve and of its arguments against those who claim that philosophy should begin with something that "is given" to the subject of knowledge. Emphasis will be given to the epistemological attempts of "consciousness" and "self-consciousness", as well as to "absolute knowledge," with which the work concludes. Upon the completion of the module, the student will have acquired detailed and critical knowledge of the Phenomenology of Spirit, as well as a basic knowledge of the whole of Hegel's thought.

Module Title	Asian Philosophies
Module Convenor	G. Steiris
Description	The course has both a historical and cross – cultural outlook. The course aims at the familiarization of the students with key figures and schools of classical Chinese philosophy so as to understand that the very act of philosophizing is not a privilege of the so-called Western civilization. The students are taught the methodology of cross-cultural and comparative philosophy. Moreover, they study key texts and seminal thinkers of the Chinese tradition in order to compare Chinese with ancient Greek philosophy.

Code: 73ΦΛΣ219	TC: 3	ECTS: 4	Category: CO	Hours: 3
----------------	-------	---------	--------------	----------

Module Title	Aesthetics
Module Convenor	G. Arabatzis
Description	Modern and contemporary art exemplifies the radical turn in aesthetics, especially after the rupture brought about by Kant's critical philosophy. Within this history of aesthetic ideas it is at first attempted to provide the epistemological presuppositions of the ancient conception of the Beautiful (kallos), then to make evident the positive metaphysical approach contained in it and its crystallization in the formation of aesthetic rules from the Antiquity and the Middle Ages until the early Modernity. The Kantian aesthetics of the "Sublime" shows clearly that philosophy abandons the ancient conception of the Beautiful that had played a structural role in aesthetics for many centuries while after WWII the Freudian conception of the "Uncanny" seems to take the place of the Sublime. Amidst a contemporary aversion against the aesthetics of representation, Hans Belting's theories are studied in which the Byzantine iconographic depiction is taken as a starting point and the history of art as a whole is seen critically towards a philosophical anthropology of images. Finally, it comes to an examination of the threefold problem of the relations between art, the now prevailing technology and the new ontologies, which focus on the problem of simulacra (within the predominance of digital images) and the disappearance of physical objects.

Module Title	Readings in Political Philosophy
Module Convenor	G. Steiris
Description	The seminar focuses on key texts of political philosophy from the 5th BC. until the end of antiquity. The aim of the course is to acquaint students, through research in both primary and secondary literature, with the concept of democracy, with a basic question of how democracies die (Steven Levitsky and Daniel Ziblatt, How do democracies die? , Metaichmio: Athens 2018). Upon completion of the seminar, the student should have become familiar with basic concepts and aspects of political philosophy, have acquired research experience and skills in writing a scientific text, respecting the methodology. At the same time, he will have familiarized himself with the shifts of democracy in history and the criticism that has been made of it.

Module Title	Philosophy of Science
Module Convenor	I. Trisokkas

Description	The module focuses on 20th-century theories that investigate the relation between methodology, epistemology and ontology in the natural and social sciences. The module's objective is the understanding of the main theses of those theories. We will begin by clarifying the basic concepts of the discussion: method, methodology, theory, knowledge, epistemology, ontology, objectivism, subjectivism, and constructionism. Next, we will systematically examine inductionism, falsificationism (Popper), the notion of scientific research programs (Lakatos), the conception of theories as structures and the idea of scientific revolutions (Kuhn), subjectivism, the distinction between traditional and new phenomenology, symbolic interaction (Mead), critical theory (Adorno), the anarchist theory of knowledge (Feyerabend), and, finally, the notion of the social construction of psychology (Danziger). Upon the completion of the module, students will have familiarized themselves with the most important 20th-century theories in the field of the philosophy of natural and social science and will have acquired a better understanding of the similarities and differences between the natural and the social sciences.

Module Title	Liberalism and Socialism
Module Convenor	G. N. Politis
Description	This course falls into to a wide field of examination of Social Philosophy. Its main purpose concerns the comprehension of the fundamental views of the two philosophical theories, their principal facts, as well as their entanglement with rival theories, such as Conservatism. To accomplish the tutoring aim, the classical theories of 17 th – 19 th centuries (for example, the ideas of John Locke, John Stuart Mill and Karl Marx, among others) are compared with contemporary liberal and socialistic variants (for instance, with the theories of John Rawls, Robert Nozick, Cornelius Castoriades and Roberto Mangabeira Unger). By the time the course is complete, students will be able to recognize not only the similarities and differences between these two theories, but they will also be able of tracing those elements among significant and more evolved versions.

Module Title	Readings in Ancient Greek Philosophy: Plato
Module Convenor	a) I. Kalogerakos – b) E. Perdikouri
Περιγραφή	a) This seminar focuses on Plato and attempts a systematic examination of main areas of his philosophy, with reference to the Republic and selected Socratic and dialectic dialogues. The aim of the seminar is to discuss key issues of Platonic philosophy in the branches of ethics, political philosophy and aesthetics. The analysis of these issues is mainly based on passages of the dialogues, taking also into account their interpretive approaches. During the seminar the students will delve into fundamental aspects of Plato's philosophy, will become familiar with the terminology of the dialogues examined as well as with the scholarly research

	on Plato. Finally, by writing and presenting a paper on Platonic philosophy, they will practice writing a scientific essay on ancient Greek philosophy. b) This seminar aims at a close reading and commenting in detail the Theaetetus of Plato, a dialogue whose epistemological questioning is crucial for the understanding of Plato's later philosophy. The question "what is knowledge" receives three successive definitions: "Knowledge is perception", "knowledge is true opinion", "knowledge is true opinion with an account". Plato examines and refutes all three, thus making of Theaetetus an aporetic dialogue. Hence, the significance of this dialogue does not rest solely on the solutions proposed and rejected but also on the solid and profound arguments, on the problems that it puts forward in regard to the proposed definitions, on the new concepts that it introduces and on the widening of the field within which a potential solution to the problem of knowledge will be formulated in later dialogues. The seminar aims at training students in the method of approaching, reading and commenting a primary philosophical text. With the successful completion of the course the students will be able to reflect on the theses and arguments of the Theaetetus and contrast them with the epistemological problems that we encounter in Plato's later dialogues.

Module Title	Philosophy of Action
Module Convenor	S. Iliopoulou
Description	The topic of this seminar belongs to the area of Philosophy of Action conceived of as "Practical Philosophy" and more specifically as Ethics. Its general aim is the critical examination of utilitarianism, one of the most important normative moral theories. Our starting point will be J. Bentham and J. S. Mill (especially his Utilitarianism). We will next examine the view that utilitarianism is untenable, because, aiming as it does at the increase of utility, it sometimes leads to the performance of morally repulsive acts. In this context we will study texts by T. Nagel, B. Williams, P. Railton etc. We will also examine the view according to which utilitarianism is unacceptable, because it is too demanding as a normative moral theory. In this context we will study texts by B. Williams, S. Wolf etc. (Certain other objections against utilitarianism will be examined as well.) As a result of participating in this seminar it is expected that students a) will become familiar with utilitarianism and with some of the most significant arguments for and against it and b) will be in a position to form an informed personal opinion about the problems examined.

Module Title	Ancient Greek Philosophy I: Presocratics
Module Convenor	G. Iliopoulos
Description	The object of the course is to make the students familiar with basic elements of the content and important issues of the reception of Presocratic philosophy. In the first phase, a general overview and evaluation of the available sources from the period of ancient Greek literature is attempted on the basis of the comprehensive relevant picture that we have been able to shape primarily due to the impressive work of Hermann Diels and Walther Kranz, who especially have left us the methodological legacy of the critical approach in connection with sufficient philological documentation. Next, the main characteristics of the presentation of the Presocratics by Plato (mainly in the later dialogues), Aristotle (mainly in the Metaphysics), Diogenes Laertius (in his well-known extensive biographical and doxographical work) and the ancient Commentators are outlined. After a brief consideration of the treatment of the Presocratics in the medieval period, the resumption of the substantive engagement with them in the Age of Modernity is presented. As a major project, the course will examine Hans-Georg Gadamer's approach to the Presocratics according to the prerequisites of contemporary philosophical hermeneutics and it will reach its conclusion with a brief consideration of the most recent research achievements. Upon completion of the course, students will be able to follow the thought of the Presocratics based on the available primary and secondary literature, having familiarized themselves with key methodological issues specific to this field.

Module Title	Philosophical Anthropology
Module Convenor	A. Lazou

Description	Philosophical anthropology, as a new branch of philosophy, distinct from different anthropologies of a mainly scientific direction (such as historical, social, cultural, ethnological, medical, linguistic anthropology, etc.), gives priority and credit to critical thinking, to the autonomy of discourse and the ability of the human intellect to compose in a free way the ways of managing reality as well as the self itself (self-awareness). This course aims to show the connection of philosophical anthropology with major trends in the history of philosophy starting from antiquity, how philosophy dealt with the concept of man, the soul and the mind-body relationship. Emphasis will be placed on the ancient Greek origins of this philosophical current. We believe that the subject and specific content of the Philosophical Anthropology course is of particular importance to the position and role of philosophy today in relation to the developments and contemporary interests of knowledge and society. Subsections of the course include reference to philosophers such as pre-Socratic thought, Plato, Aristotle, John Locke, Immanuel Kant, G. F. Hegel, Karl Marx, Friedrich Nietzsche, Max Scheler, Ernst Cassirer, etc.

Module Title	Philosophy of Religion
Module Convenor	ESPA Convenor
Description	The course offers an extensive overview of the concepts and key questions preoccupying the Philosophy of Religion, past and present. Students are invited to an intellectual journey encompassing Philosophical Metaphysics and Epistemology as these intertwine with the fundamentals of (mainly) Christian theology, with particular focus on the challenges raised against faith and the arguments mobilized to the latter's defense. Students will be sufficiently acquainted with the various currents and schools shaping the question of God from classical Greek antiquity to the Middle Ages through to the present day, including Christian apologetics and rebuttals to it. Special emphasis is placed on Kantian thought and the philosophical scene of the 20 th century, with a view to accustoming students with some of the latest developments in the field. A further goal is to assist students in examining faith from a detached and therefore more critical point of view.

Module Title	Ancient Greek Philosophy V: Political Philosophy
Module Convenor	G. Arabatzis

Description	The course will focus on the concept of political organization and, in particular, on the phenomenon of political friendship in antiquity, especially in Plato and Aristotle, while extensive reference will be made to later developments, to the philosophy of the Hellenistic period (Stoics) and late antiquity up to the emergence of Christianity. At the same time, the internal consistency of the views on the structure of political systems will be shown in relation to the phenomenon of friendship between citizens as a precondition and component of each system. In addition, will be examined the concept and theory of the duration, the rise and fall of political systems and the possibility of their revival or reform. Emphasis will be placed on the phenomenon of the city-state, while the identity and actual weight of this political organization will be analyzed, as well as its relationship with other forms of organization such as the empire, and the views on the daily life of citizens in the various cities, and the way in which political activity is investigated (Aristotle). Finally, the concept of political science will be approached in relation to other sciences that examine the phenomenon of living life, for example in Aristotelian philosophy.

Module Title	Renaissance Philosophy
Module Convenor	ESPA Convenor
Description	The course focuses on Renaissance Philosophy and Early Modern Philosophy. The students are introduced to Humanism and Renaissance anthropology by reading Pico's della Mirandola De hominis dignitate . Then they focus on the transmission of texts and ideas by Byzantine scholars to Renaissance Italy. Moreover, the course focuses on Renaissance Platonism and its influence to early modern political thought.

Module Title	Logic II
Module Convenor	E. Triantafyllou
Description	The course focuses on recent, philosophically motivated, developments in Logic. The aim of the course is to familiarize students with the fundamental concepts and emerging issues in Philosophical Logic. Content: First-order Languages. Ontological commitments of theories. Reference and Truth. Explicit and contextual definitions, theories of descriptions. Self-reference and semantic paradoxes. Tarski's theory of truth, the distinction between object-language and meta-language. Modalities: possibility and necessity, modal propositions. Scope distinctions and interactions between modalities, quantifiers, and negation. Modalities de dicto and de re. Possible world semantics. Systems of non-classical logic and their philosophical motivations. Time and statements about the future. The phenomenon of vagueness. The concept of contradiction, dialetheism. Upon completion of the course, the student will be familiar with some of the recent developments in the field of Philosophical Logic and will have an understanding of the interplay between Logic and Philosophy.

Module Title	Readings in Moral Philosophy
Module Convenor	a) I. Prelorentzos – b) G. Kakoliris – c) M. Chorianopoulou
Description	a) Familiarization with fundamental concepts and questions of Moral Philosophy (happiness, good and evil, moral virtues, the relationship between is and ought, self-care, appropriate relations with other beings, human and non-human, how can we overcome ethical relativism etc.) and with the methods of examination of the aforementioned in texts of ancient philosophers (Plato, Aristotle, Epicurus, Stoics); of modern philosophers (Hobbes, Descartes, Spinoza, Malebranche, Rousseau, Scottish Enlightenment thinkers, Kant, Utilitarians etc.); and of two early 20th century philosophers (Bergson, Jankélévitch). The aim of the seminar is to make students understand the need of a critical, non-dogmatic approach towards moral issues and to underline the close relation of moral philosophy with metaphysics, philosophical anthropology and political philosophy. Emphasis will be placed on the vastly different philosophical approaches of emotions, and the characteristics through which moralists (especially the French moralists) approach human existence, particularly during the 17th and 18th centuries. Upon completion of the course, students will be familiarized with key positions of prominent moral thinkers, and will have thoroughly understood how much contemporary moral theories owe to the forenamed philosophers. b) Great attention will be paid during the seminar to the acquisition of the knowledge necessary for writing an adequate scientific work (structure, argument, citations, footnotes, bibliography, search for available literature, etc.). The above process is supported by a series of exercises that students undertake either individually or in groups. The whole effort is completed by writing the final paper. The philosophical topic of this seminar concerns the way in which a number of contemporary continental philosophers, such as Emmanuel Levinas (1906–1995), Simon Critchley, Judith Butler, Jacques Derrida (1930–2004), and feminist philosophers of ‘care ethics’ understand ethical responsibility. A common axis that governs the individual approaches of the above philosophers is the notion that responsibility does not derive from the actions of an agent; it is not based on the freedom of their will. Conversely, it is the other who makes the subject responsible. In this sense, the character of responsibility is heteronomic and is not based on the autonomy of the subject, as is the case with Kantian moral philosophy. Upon completion of the seminar, students will be familiar with the requirements of writing a scientific paper. Through a detailed commentary on their work by the person teaching the seminar, students will know the problems of their essays and what exactly they need to pay attention to for improvement. They will have been able to approach a text critically, to express their views in a thorough way, and to cooperate with their fellow students in the joint presentation of a topic. They will also have partaken of the basic moral positions of a number of contemporary continental philosophers. c) The aim of the Seminar is to familiarize the students with the basic concepts used in moral thinking. The main key positions and arguments of the most important normative ethical theories will be presented, in order to enable the students to develop the cognitive background that will allow them to process contemporary ethical issues. Basic problems regarding the definition of Good Life (i.e. a life worth living) and the identification of inherent goods and values, will be presented through the doctrines of the philosophers of the classical era and the Hellenistic period. Regarding the efforts to find criteria to define the right action as well as the virtuous character, we will refer to later and modern normative ethical theories (deontological, consequential, social contract theory, meritocracy theory and feminist ethics), however special emphasis will be given to the Kantian tradition.

Module Title	Readings in Ancient Greek Philosophy: Aristotle
Module Convenor	G. Iliopoulos
Description	The aim of the seminar is the study and analysis of selected chapters and passages from the Nicomachean Ethics as an important work of ancient Greek philosophical literature. On the basis of a general-introductory approach to the uniqueness of Aristotelian ethical philosophy vis-à-vis other neighboring and comparable disciplines (primarily Political and Theoretical Philosophy), issues are raised that revolve around key concepts such as: virtue, experience-science-knowledge, soul, good, poiesis (production), praxis (action), life (practical, political, theoretical), prudence-wisdom-intelligence-temperance, justice, autarky, eudemonia, reason, habit-disposition-moral character, nature, art, good man-great citizen, mean-excess-excellence, unity and diversity of virtue/virtues. On a more general level, the Aristotelian ideal is to be examined within the world of the ancient Greek city-state, as well as the conditions of the later and contemporary reception of the Aristotelian ethical thought. Upon completion of the seminar, students will have acquired an overview of the content of the fundamental Aristotelian work as comprehensive as possible and they will be able to critically reconstruct its essential components.

Module Title	Issues in Modern Philosophy
Module Convenor	a) I. Prelorentzos – b) I. Trisokkas – c) M. Pangalos
Description	a) This Modern Philosophy seminar focuses on main viewpoints of the most prominent modern philosophers (Hobbes, Descartes, Spinoza, Leibniz, Locke, Rousseau, Hume, Kant, Herder, Nietzsche, etc.) on the fields of ontology, epistemology, philosophical anthropology, ethics, social and political philosophy and philosophy of history. The aim of the seminar is the understanding, on one hand, of the relations between philosophy, religion and sciences and, on the other hand, of the debates on main problems that concerned the philosophers of that period (God and nature, essence and existence, becoming, substance, matter, movement, actual and virtual, mind and body, faculties of the soul or mind (senses, perception, imagination, memory, emotion, intellect, will, judgment), differences between human beings and animals, causality, necessity and

	contingency, freedom, finite and infinite, space and time, duration and eternity, absolute and relative, individual, individualization and universality). Upon completion of the course, students will be familiarized with the positions of the most prominent modern philosophers in the fundamental aspects of their thought, and will have understood the need of a critical, non-dogmatic approach to each issue. b) The module belongs to the domain of Modern European Philosophy and focuses on Immanuel Kant's (1724-1804) Critique of Pure Reason. This work is Kant's magnum opus and one of the most important texts of European philosophy. The module's objective is the study of articles that have been recently published in top-tier philosophy journals and handle systematic issues in Kant's theory of knowledge, ontology, methodology and philosophy of science. The student is obliged to submit an essay that discusses critically one such article and also to pass an oral exam concerning its content. Upon the completion of the module, students will have familiarized themselves with the theses and arguments of the Critique of Pure Reason, will have acquired the ability to converse critically about Kant's philosophy and will have developed skills pertaining to the writing and understanding of articles published in top-tier philosophy journals. c) The objective of this course is the understanding of the crucial issues related with the question of the subject. In the European history, this concept arises at the 17th century with Descartes. But, how is to be understood today, as the receptor of mental experiences and representations (accordingly to Descartes and Empiricism) or in another way after the Wittgenstein-revolution? The traditional Metaphysics uses a mode of attribution which presupposes a subject and an attribute ("Socrates is sitting"). What is the difference between this traditional concept of the subject of attribution and a contemporary concept which is based on the reconstruction of the totality actions and narratives of that subject? A new sociological and anthropological view (Marcel Mauss, Louis Dumont) can enrich this new conception of the subject, as it arises, for instance, in the philosophy of Vincent Descombes and Charles Taylor. What is, finally, the relation of this new conception of subject with the "philosophies of the difference" (like that of Levinas and Derrida) and with the philosophy of action by Paul Ricœur?

Module Title	Philosophy – Politics – Economics
Module Convenor	G. N. Politis
Description	Philosophy identifies itself as the field that establishes the principles and the axiomatic systems, which, subsequently, are applied and assessed by the field of politics, as far as their economic repercussions are concerned. However, currently, the economic domain is dominant at the expense of politics, and philosophy. Against this propensity, the aim of this seminar is a synthetic study of these three fields. Moreover, another goal of this seminar, is to unveil the origins of politics and economics, as both stem from the field of philosophy. In general, these aims result from the main concept of the academic research programs "Philosophy-

	Politics-Economy”, which are based on the belief that a synthetic study of the disciplines of philosophy, politics and economics lead to a deeper and more thorough understanding of social reality.

Module Title	Epistemology

Description	Since the main purpose of seminars is to familiarize students with the writing of philosophical papers, great attention is paid in this seminar to the acquisition of the knowledge necessary for writing an adequate scientific work (structure, argument, citations, footnotes, bibliography, search for bibliography, etc.). The above process is supported by a series of exercises that students undertake either individually or in groups. The whole effort is completed by writing the final paper. The topics of the final essays of this seminar are related to the work of the French philosopher Michel Foucault (1926–1984), who during the ‘archaeological’ period of his work sought, among other things, the conditions for the formation of scientific knowledge in a certain period, while during his ‘genealogical’ period he examined the way in which scientific knowledge is intertwined with power. During the seminar, Foucault’s key texts are analysed to gain as deep an understanding of them as possible. Upon completion of the seminar, students will be familiar with the requirements of writing a scientific paper. Through detailed commentary on their work by the person teaching the seminar, students will know the problems of their essays and what exactly they need to pay attention to for improvement. They will have been able to approach a text critically, to express their views in a thorough way, and to cooperate with their fellow students in the joint presentation of a topic. Module Title	Contemporary Philosophy II: Logical Positivism – Analytic Philosophy – Pragmatism
Module Convenor	M. Pangalos
Description	The objective of this course is the understanding of the most crucial issues of Analytic tradition. Beginning from Wittgenstein’s Tractatus, we shall examine this fundamental text in parallel with the attack by the Logical Atomists (Russell) and the Logical Positivist (Carnap) against language and their vain attempt to create a logical “perfect” language. The mature Wittgenstein fights against this attempt. In radical opposition with Quine and Davidson, in the Philosophical Investigations an authentic Holism of meaning is developed by Wittgenstein. We shall examine, also, the pragmatism of Richard Rorty and the critiques it was subjected to, from Charles Taylor to Rorty. Finally, we will see how Irish Murdoch reads in a moral perspective the turn of Analytic philosophy to language.

Module Title	Contemporary Philosophy III: Hermeneutics – Phenomenology
Module Convenor	F. Vassiliou
Description	The course deals with epistemological and ontological issues, focusing, more specifically, on the phenomenological thought of the French philosopher Maurice Merleau-Ponty. Through a systematic study of his important work Phenomenology of Perception (1945), we examine how Merleau-Ponty adopts the phenomenological method and how, from such a perspective, he criticizes both empiricism and intellectualism. Central issues are clarified regarding (a) perceptual intentionality, (b) the role of the body in our perceptual correlation with things, the world, and other human beings, (c) the relationship of perception to language, and (d) the role of acquisition of habits. Additionally, the discussion is enriched with elements from current dialogues, primarily concerning the philosophy of perception and the possibility of acquiring knowledge. Students will have the opportunity to become familiar with the key aspects of Merleau-Ponty’s phenomenological philosophy.

Module Title	Philosophy of Mind
Module Convenor	F. Vassiliou
Description	The course is offered as a general introduction to the Philosophy of Mind. It more specifically deals with the main current approaches regarding: the nature of mind, the relation between the mind and the body, the characteristics of conscious phenomena, and the possibility of Artificial Intelligence. In parallel, some of the thorniest issues one confronts in this field are presented: the so called “difficult problem” of consciousness, the problem of intentionality, the problem of mental causation. We will also have the opportunity to thoroughly discuss the well-known arguments of the Chinese Room, the scientist Mary, and the phenomenal qualities of bats and (philosophical) zombies. By the end of the course, students will have acquired knowledge of the principal ontological and epistemological issues around mentality and mental phenomena.

Module Title	Modern Greek Philosophy
Module Convenor	G. Barbaroussis

Description	The subject of the course is the history of modern Greek philosophy from Plethon to the late modern Greek Enlightenment (19 th century). The purpose of the course is for students to get aware of the modern Greek thought, to understand and study basic philosophical problems that they employed her. In this context, the relations of modern Greek philosophy with European and ancient philosophy are examined, as well as the influences it received from them, as well as its particularity. The intellectual movement of the Neo-Hellenic Enlightenment as well as its important role in the ideological preparation of the Greek Revolution of 1821. The second part of the course examines the political thought of Cornelios Kastoriadis. Upon completion of the course, students will have understood the evolution of modern Greek philosophy, as well as its role in the formation of modern Greek culture as well as its effects on modern Greek philosophy.

Module Title	Bioethics
Module Convenor	E. D. Protopapadakis
Description	As a branch of Applied Ethics, Bioethics aims to address in a functional way ethical issues that are either created or exacerbated by the constant and rapid progress of life sciences. Bioethics is the meeting point and the intersection of several scientific fields: law, medicine, theology, psychology, sociology, etc. Its axis, however, remains ethical philosophy. This course aims at outlining the central principles of bioethics, and discussing the main issues it addresses: ensuring human autonomy and dignity, maximising benefit and minimising risk, and defending justice in this increasingly complex world.

Module Title	Ancient Greek Philosophy IV: Late Antiquity
Module Convenor	E. Perdikouri
Description	Hellenistic philosophy covers the time span between the death of Aristotle in 322 B.C. and the definitive edition of the aristotelian corpus by Andronicus of Rhodes around the middle of the first century B.C. The following era is the so-called Late Antiquity in which there are two distinct periods: the imperial times of the pax romana up until the end of the 2nd c. AD; and, after the death of Marcus Aurelius, a time of crisis and transition which leads from the Ancient Pagan world to the Medieval Christian world. In the first two centuries of the Christian era we come across the renaissance of Aristotelianism. Peripatetic philosophy did not produce any original philosophers, albeit it did produce an extremely important commentator, namely Alexander of Aphrodisias. In opposition to what was going on in the Peripatetic School, the renaissance of Platonism in the 3rd c. AD is due to a most important philosopher who formulates a new philosophical system which incorporates the basic principles of the philosophy of Plato while proposing a new mode of Platonism as well as new solutions to the essential problems left open by its founder. This philosopher is Plotinus, the greatest philosopher of Late Antiquity, who is the founder of the Neoplatonic philosophy. This course is text-centered. We will read selected chapters and excerpts from Plotinus' Enneads , focus on the problems that Plotinus means to solve, examine his criticisms to the doctrines of his predecessors and pinpoint the originality of his theories. This course aims at offering students a complete picture of the first principles and main doctrines of Plotinus epistemology and metaphysics. With the completion of the course the students will be able to use their knowledge of the philosophy of Plotinus in order to study the later Neoplatonists: Porphyry, Iamblichus, Proclus and Damascius.

Module Title	Contemporary Philosophy IV: Existentialism – Postmodernism
Module Convenor	G. Kakoliris
Description	For the most part, this course focuses on the existential hermeneutics of Martin Heidegger, as developed in one of the greatest philosophical works of the 20th century, Being and Time. The preoccupation with Heideggerian thought during the course takes the form of a close reading of this work. Heideggerian existential hermeneutics is examined in conjunction with the work of existentialist philosophers such as Jean-Paul Sartre. Emphasis will also be placed on Heidegger's relationship with his teacher, the father of phenomenology Edmund Husserl, as well as the way in which Heidegger has influenced contemporary French thought (Levinas, Derrida, Lyotard, etc.). Therefore, this course is in dialogue with the courses FLS 213 Contemporary Philosophy I: Continental Philosophy, of the 5th semester, and FLS 238 Contemporary Philosophy III: Hermeneutics-Phenomenology, of the 7th semester. The second part of the course deals with Jean-François Lyotard's pivotal text, The Postmodern Condition (1979), in order for the student to understand how the term 'postmodern' was introduced into contemporary thought and what it originally came to signal. Upon completion of the course, students will have become acquainted with basic concepts of Martin Heidegger's existential analytics as expressed in his work Being and Time, as well as the innovative place this work occupies in the history of philosophy. They will be able to identify similarities and differences between Heideggerian thought and its ancestors (Husserl, etc.), but also to see how the work influenced Heidegger's descendants, as well as the criticisms they made of it (Sartre, Levinas, Derrida, Lyotard, Arendt, Nancy, etc.). They will also have learned how the term 'postmodern' was introduced into philosophical literature, the content initially attributed to this term, and how it came to influence contemporary thought afterwards.

Module Title	Issues in Contemporary Philosophy
Module Convenor	I. Prelourentzos
Description	The seminar focuses on contemporary French philosophy. The highly unusual institutional framework, that for two centuries governs the teaching of philosophy in (both secondary and higher) education in France, will be intently presented; also F. Worms's theory about the main philosophical moments during the 20 th

	century France (that of spirit, of existence, and of the structure-difference), as well as the present moment. Aspects of the work of Bergson, Jankélévitch, Sartre, Merleau-Ponty, Camus, Deleuze, Levinas, Ricoeur, Castoriadis, Marion, Jaquet and Sabot will be thoroughly studied, in particular in the following fields: ontology, epistemology, philosophical anthropology, ethics, aesthetics and social and political philosophy. The seminar aims to make students understand a) the indissoluble relation of philosophy with its “outside” (sciences, arts, literature, politics, everyday life), especially during the 1930-1960 period, and b) the reasons that led to the transition from one philosophical moment to another, on the basis of ruptures as well as fruitful recoveries of important theories of precedent philosophers. Upon completion of the seminar, the participants will be familiarized with fundamental theories of important contemporary philosophers, will have understood the need of a critical approach of problems, and will be able to write papers of academic standards.

Module Title	Philosophy of Language
Module Convenor	M. Pangalos
Description	The objective of this course is the understanding of the Analytic tradition of the Philosophy of Language but also the dialogue with the other major philosophical tradition of 20 th century, i.e. the phenomenological. Beginning with the first philosophy of Wittgenstein, namely Tractatus , we shall see the exciting itinerary which led him to the conception of language as social action, as it is developed in the Philosophical Investigations and, consequently, to the resulting awareness that the linguistic analysis presupposes the examination both of social institutions and practices (V. Descombes). This Wittgensteinian conception of meaning shall be examined together with the conception of Ricoeur (about the meaning of the “Self”) and Levinas (about the meaning of the “Other”). Thus, in the end of the course the student will perhaps be in a better position in order to understand the famous “Linguistic Turn” and, based on this turn of philosophy to language, to distinguish certain parallels between philosophical traditions, which may seem unrelated and incompatible, but in fact they are interwoven, like the phenomenological and the analytic one.

Module Title	Philosophy of Culture and Aesthetics
Module Convenor	a) G. Arabatzis – b) A. Lazou – c) G. Barbaroussis
Description	a) The course focuses on the distinction between culture and civilisation (Kultur - Zivilisation) and the idea that the former constitutes the civilisation in terms of everyday life, while, in the process, it cannot be distinguished from phenomena of coercion or merely moral commitment that are determinant of the subject and its heteronomous construction. Culture in this sense is understood as a reflection of the outside with dominant and dominating constructivist dispositions. The aesthetic criterion, following Friedrich Nietzsche and other thinkers, leaves the space of (transcendental) beauty to take on the dimensions of an unsettling openness, akin to the coercion or morality of any culture. The problem widens towards a contemporary ontology of constructivism, which cannot be independent of the technological archiving of the world. This new aesthetics, the main pathway to ontology, is fundamentally pictorial and corresponds to a visual complex with ambitions of global domination. The speculative dimension of technology seems to account for and partially subordinate the phenomenological flesh. b) During the seminar, the terms Culture-Aesthetics and their various uses in the history of philosophy will be examined. The conceptual links between art, philosophy and culture will be exemplified, while we will study by following readings of original texts philosophers' views on art and culture from antiquity to the present day. Students are encouraged to participate to dialogue and an interpretive approach of representative works of art (with an emphasis on ancient drama) developing their own reflections and write and present essays. Texts by Plato, Aristotle, Kant, Hegel, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, Cassirer, Langer, Adorno, Benjamin, Brecht etc. are cited as examples. c) The seminar will examine issues of the philosophy of culture that European thought mainly after the appearance in Europe of the intellectual movement of the Enlightenment, which was accompanied by the break with traditional notions of culture, man, knowledge and the organization of societies. Rousseau's views on the creation and organization of societies and on the origin, foundations and legitimization of political power will also be examined. The seminar will be an examination and analysis through the tasks undertaken by the students with the respective guidance.

Module Title	Seminar: Key Issues in Ancient Greek Philosophy

Module Convenor	G. Iliopoulos
Description	The subject of the seminar is the treatment of selected issues that fall into the philosophical branches of ontology, cosmology, philosophy of nature and theology, as they are developed in the late Platonic dialogue Timaeus and the XIIth book (Lamda) of Aristotle's Metaphysics . Specifically, the focus lies on: a. the understanding of the Timaeus according to its dramaturgy and structure in general, as well as its comparative dating within the overall Platonic oeuvre, b. the connections between the proem and the main part, as they arise from specific questions of method and content (e.g. plausible account, intelligible model, role of the Demiurge, demonstration of the existence of Forms), c. the foundation of the content of the dialogue as a wide-ranging synthesis between "classical" Platonic ontology and theory of values, Pythagorean mathematical cosmology, Ionian natural philosophy and a multitude of empirical observations, d. the continuity and discontinuity between Platonic and Aristotelian concepts, e. the main tendencies of the reception of classical texts over the centuries. Upon completion of the seminar, students will have make themselves familiar with the fundamental concepts of Plato and Aristotle regarding the in-depth understanding of nature and the cosmos and will also be able to overview these reflections in connection with the overall historical development of philosophy.

Module Title	Political Philosophy
Module Convenor	M. Chorianopoulou
Description	The course mainly focuses on the historical review of the basic theories of rights since Antiquity and the presentation of the most important theories of natural law, with an emphasis on those that emerged during Modernity and form the foundation of modern Western civilization. Emphasis is placed on the tradition of the Enlightenment and Liberalism, so that students may understand in depth the contribution of these traditions to the formation of the rights-centered view that characterizes the present era. In addition, it focuses on the theoretical approaches developed during the 20th century, as a response to specific historical events, as well as on the practical, legal and philosophical challenges that arose following the iconic Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948). Support for human rights increased significantly after the Second World War, and the political philosophy of this period creatively incorporated them into its thinking. Therefore, the main liberal and libertarian approaches, mainly from the Anglo-Saxon philosophy, are highlighted and examined in the light of current ethical concerns.

Module Title	Political Philosophy
Module Convenor	V. Nicolaidou-Kyrianidou
Description	This course aims to study the political thought of the eighteenth century, especially through the tension between liberalism and republicanism. Particular attention will be paid to Montesquieu’s political theory. It will focus on issues such as the nature and the principle of government with respect to the tradition of Natural Law, and the types of governments. Next, the separation of powers will be discussed, considering the rupture brought about by the philosophy of the seventeenth century with the classical tradition. Topics include Montesquieu’s notion of political virtue in comparison with both ancient political philosophy and Machiavelli.

Establishment-mission-function: The Applied Philosophy Research Laboratory was established in May 1999 as a “Philosophical and Technological Laboratory of Applied and Ecological Philosophy” (Government Gazette 92/B/11.05.1999) and received its current name in 2017 (Government Gazette 3756/B/25.10.2017). It is attached to the Philosophy Department as an autonomous unit. Its purpose is to facilitate research in the area of applied philosophy and provide teaching support to students and faculty members in both undergraduate and postgraduate levels of studies. The Lab seeks to foster every form of collaboration with other Laboratories, Research Centres or Units, as well as with international organisations and units, public or private, and higher education institutions in Greece or abroad. For this reason, since 2016 it has been hosting the Greek Unit of the UNESCO Chair (University of Haifa). The Lab seeks to further and convey knowledge on areas of philosophical research by means of hosting postgraduate programmes of study, publishing works of original philosophical research as well as journals, and organizing conferences, as well as inviting significant scholars from Greece and abroad.

Establishment-mission-function: The Institutional Discourse Research Laboratory was approved by the 3rd General Assembly of the Faculty of Philosophy, Pedagogy and Psychology, on 15/5/2018, after the Professor Georgios Arabatzis’ proposal, and its establishment was published in the Government Gazette of 18/10/2018, issue B’, no 4678. Professor Georgios Arabatzis was elected as the Laboratory’s director. The Laboratory’s subject of research and scholarly activity is the Greek, institutional, language practices throughout the time spectrum of our history, from Antiquity up to Modernity through Byzantium, with a special emphasis on the Byzantine period as of paramount importance for the formation of the universal institutional discourse. The term “language practices” concerns the points where private wills and public normativities coincide and, in a wider sense, it refers to the development of an ethos capable of adjusting privacies according to the language and expression of institutions. Thus, the institutional discourse appears as regulative of the privacies and of the expressive normativity. The Laboratory’s research focuses on formal theoretical texts of the relevant tradition, but also on theoretically informal evidence, such as legislative initiatives, educational programmes, manifestos, autobiographical documents, representations of the everyday life of the delivering practices of institutional discourse, theoretical confessions, visual documentations etc., on the basis of an analysis that will be searching the relations of philosophy and institutional discourse with the specific linguistic practices on the basis of historically detected scientific, linguistic and educational manifestations.

Establishment-mission-function: The Political Philosophy Research Laboratory: From Action to Theory (EPoPhi) is a structure of the N.K.U.A.'s Philosophy Department (Government Gazette 2182/B/12.06.2018). It is a team-based effort to showcase and philosophically approach issues concerning the contemporary socio-political reality (acts of racism, conspiracy theories, fundamentalism, multiculturalism, lawlessness and democratic tolerance, etc.).

But why "From action to theory"? This wording suggests that the upcoming activities of our Laboratory aim to put political philosophy to the service of events, so that it is not an exclusively academic, omphaloscopic endeavour. In this context, the Laboratory's aim is to function as an academic research facility which does not remain on the margins or fringes of political and social developments — instead, it seeks to bring political meditation into the eye of the cyclone. Under these conditions, cooperation with other disciplines of humanities and social sciences will also be sought, since the well-rounded critical approach to modern reality necessarily calls for interdisciplinarity. For this reason our Laboratory supports the interdisciplinary approach and dialogue between different political traditions, as well as between, on the one hand, politics and, on the other, the ethical, historical, religious or anthropological thought. The struggle of thought and "diachrony" are for us necessary and indispensable presuppositions in order to understand "synchrony".

Establishment-mission-function: Philosophy, Politics and Economics courses were born out of the conviction that combined study of these three disciplines would be beneficial to both students and the society at large. Since the first PPE degree course was established at the University of Oxford in the 1920s, major universities around the world have offered similar programs that stem from the same idea.

Philosophy explores and sets the principles and value systems that are implemented through politics, taking into consideration their economic implications. The examination of all three aspects lead to more coherent policies that benefit societies. However, over the years, the economy has gradually gained the primary role at the expense of both politics and philosophy. This phenomenon was recently apparent in Greece during the era of its financial crisis.

The “Philosophy-Politics-Economy Laboratory”, PPElab.gr, of the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens was founded in order to serve the joint study of these three disciplines. PPElab aims to study, document, analyze, and promote public policies. In order to achieve its goals, PPElab collaborates with institutes and research centers in Greece and abroad. Through this collaboration it aspires to create a broad framework of consensus and synergies that will contribute to the public discourse on contemporary politics and economics, and help identify, as well as overcome, major misguided perceptions that form the causes of the contemporary societal crisis.

Establishment-mission-function: The “Philosophy and Art” Laboratory was founded in 2021 in the Department of Philosophy and serves research in both ancient modern and contemporary sources on the relationship between philosophy and art, utilizing the modern tools of interdisciplinarity and comparability with other studies and theoretical fields. The examination of human creativity in the field of art, but also the conditions and criteria for accepting and understanding art and its utilization in everyday life are questions of investigation in a theoretical as well as a practical/artistic dimension. In addition, innovative research programs of philosophical examination of art in relation to pedagogical and therapeutic practices as well as IT and digital technology are promoted.

The objectives of the Laboratory are to cover academic, research, educational and publishing needs in the subjects of philosophy and art, as well as in related scientific fields, the supervision of undergraduate and postgraduate students, the development of new educational and research material, postgraduate programs and files as a basis for new research data.

VI. MOBILITY – STUDENT EXCHANGES

CHAPTER TWELVE

12. STUDIES, ACTIVITIES AND TRAINEESHIP OF STUDENTS ABROAD

12.1 Erasmus+ Programme for studies abroad

12.1.1 Erasmus+: general information

The Erasmus+ Programme is the EU funding programme for the education, training, youth and sports. Thanks to the Erasmus+ Programme undergraduate, postgraduate and doctoral students can study at a university or higher education institution of another participating country for a period of 3 to 12 months. Participating countries (“programme countries”) are (a) the 27 member states of the European Union, (b) 6 countries outside the European Union: North Macedonia, Iceland, Lichtenstein, Norway, Serbia and Turkey and (c) Switzerland as a “partner country”.

The principle permeating the Erasmus+ Programme is that studies abroad are fully acknowledged by the institution of origin, mostly owing to the European system of ECTS credits transfer. For the student participation in the programme to be possible, there needs to exist an agreement of collaboration between the universities involved. The students participating in the Erasmus+ Programme receive all the ECTS credits that correspond to the modules they successfully attended in any of the participating in the Erasmus+ Programme overseas Departments.

- For the cover of any additional expenses due to the difference concerning living costs abroad, students can be awarded Erasmus+ scholarships.

12.1.2 Erasmus+ Programme in the Department of Philosophy

The Universities with which the Philosophy Department has signed an inter-university agreement of collaboration (“Bilateral Agreement”) for the exchange of undergraduate, postgraduate and doctoral students within the frame of the Erasmus+ Student Exchange Programme in the current academic year are the following:

1. Université Paul-Valéry-Montpellier III (France)
2. Université Paris Nanterre (Paris X) (France)
3. Universität Leipzig (Germany)
4. Univerzita Palackého v Olomouci (Czech Republic)
5. Bulgarian Academy of Sciences (Bulgaria)
6. Josip Juraj Strossmayer University of Osijek (Croatia)

7. University of Nicosia (Cyprus)
8. University of Novi Sad (Serbia)
9. University of Ljubljana (Slovenia)
10. Université Paris Panthéon-Sorbonne (France)
11. Union University of Belgrade (Serbia)
12. Università di Bologna (Italy).

- Those interested in participating can submit their application accompanied by all relevant documents in the Department’s Secretariat.

12.2 Erasmus+ Programme regarding traineeship of students abroad

The Erasmus+ scheme about traineeship of students abroad gives the opportunity to undergraduate, postgraduate and doctoral University students to accomplish a period of traineeship, funded for a duration of 2 to 4 months, in Universities, Research Centres and Organisations in

(a) member states of the European Union,

(b) countries within the programme that are not EU members: Iceland, Lichtenstein, Norway,

Serbia, Turkey and North Macedonia,

(c) universities-members of the European network CIVIS (below, 12.3.1).

Each academic year, in March, the N.K.U.A.'s Department of European and International Relations announces the places approved for the following academic year.

- Conditions for participation, necessary documentation, as well as the criteria and procedure of the candidates' evaluation are specified in the Call, which is uploaded on the abovementioned N.K.U.A. website (12.1.2), as well as on the Philosophy Department's website (Secretariat Announcements).

Contact: N.K.U.A. Department of European and International Relations, Panepistimiou Street 30, 1st floor, Erasmus Office; responsible for traineeship: Ms Aphrodite Vassou, tel.: +30 210 368 9722, e-mail: avassou@uoa.gr

- Those interested in participating can submit their online application and necessary documents via the following website:

12.3 Studies and activities abroad within the frame of CIVIS

12.3.1 CIVIS: general information

CIVIS (European Civic University) forms an alliance-collaboration of European Universities, which was created with the statute of a European University that meets the criteria of the European Commission Erasmus+ call.

The European network CIVIS now consists of the following Universities:

1. National and Kapodistrian University of Athens (Athens, Greece)
2. Aix-Marseille Université (Aix-en-Provence and Marseille, France)
3. Université Libre de Bruxelles (Brussels, Belgium)
4. Universitatea din Bucuresti (Bucharest, Rumania)
5. Universidad Autónoma de Madrid (Madrid, Spain)
6. Sapienza Università di Roma (Rome, Italy)
7. Stockholms Universitet (Stockholm, Sweden)
8. Eberhard-Karls-Universität Tübingen (Tübingen, Germany)
9. University of Glasgow (Glasgow, United Kingdom)
10. Paris Lodron Universität Salzburg (PLUS), (Salzburg, Austria)
11. University of Lausanne (UNIL) (Lausanne, Switzerland)

12.3.2 Studies in the member universities of the Universities Union CIVIS

In the context of the Erasmus+ Programme the N.K.U.A.'s Department of European and International Relations stipulates places for studies in the member universities of the Universities Union CIVIS (with minimum duration of studies 3 months). Subsequently, the Philosophy Department announces these available places to all cycles of studies.

Each academic year (in November) the places that have been approved for next academic year are advertised. The students who are selected in the current academic year will study at the member universities of the Universities Union CIVIS in the winter or spring semester of next academic year.

MEMBER OF ACADEMIC STAFF IN CHARGE OF CIVIS IN THE PHILOSOPHY DEPARTMENT
Professor Georgios Arabatzis tel.: +30 210 727 7507, e-mail: garabatz@philosophy.uoa.gr
Assistant Professor Ioannis Trissokas tel.: +30 210 727 7531, e-mail: idtrissokas@philosophy.uoa.gr

- Conditions for participation, necessary documentation, as well as the criteria and procedure of the candidates' evaluation are stipulated in a Call, which (a) is uploaded on the following website:

Erasmus+ Programme studies in the member universities of the Universities Union CIVIS http://www.interel.uoa.gr/erasmus/civis.html

and subsequently (b) is specified in the Philosophy Department's website (1. Secretariat Announcements and 2. Undergraduate Studies → Erasmus).

- Those interested in participating can submit their application accompanied by the relevant documents in the Department's Secretariat.

12.3.3 Schemes in the member universities of the Universities Union CIVIS

(a) Short term student mobility programmes

In the context of CIVIS the N.K.U.A.'s Department of European and International Relations announces short term student mobility programmes (international days/weeks and short term schools) for the member universities of the Universities Union. These programmes are described in each call for participation, where the conditions for participation and deadlines of proposal submission are stipulated.

Contact: e-mail: info-civis@uoa.gr

- The call for participation is uploaded on the following website: www.interel.uoa.gr/erasmus/sm.html.

(b) Workshops, seminars, courses, programs, competitions

The member universities of the Universities Union CIVIS organize via the internet:

- (i) online workshops, each time on a different topic, some of which will be of interest to students (e.g. workshops on postgraduate, doctoral or postdoctoral study and ways to fund these),
- (ii) blended learning courses, some of which focus on the subject of philosophy (e.g. for doctoral students),
- (iii) seminars for learning a foreign language, online language meetings,
- (iv) seminars for acquiring soft skills,
- (v) online courses,
- (vi) photography competitions,
- (vii) Global CIVIS Days,
- (viii) blended intensive programs (BIPs), which combine online teaching with a short-term physical mobility; they have an interdisciplinary character and make use of novel educational methods.
- (ix) CIVIS Open Online Courses.

- The educational activities undertaken by the students of the first and second cycles of study in the context of the CIVIS alliance are noted in the document that accompanies their degree.

Additionally,

(x) students of the N.K.U.A. have also the opportunity to participate in the European Student Assembly:

<https://framaforms.org/application-european-student-assembly-2023-1664736409>

- Information: Department of European and International Relations, N.K.U.A., Panepistimiou 30, tel.: +30 210 368 9681, and on the CIVIS website (see above, 12.3.1).

(c) Where to find information on the activities of CIVIS (programs, courses, etc.)

The activities of the member universities of the Universities Union CIVIS that are addressed to students of all three cycles of study, as well as to postdoctoral students, expand continuously in many fields of research, education and civilization. These activities are divided into specific categories, which appear on the CIVIS website (see above, 12.3.1). The CIVIS website is constantly informed on the latest news (actions, programs, proposals, etc.) of the member universities of the Universities Union CIVIS.

- Information concerning educational programs, courses, activities (CIVIS Courses, Open Online Courses, Blended Intensive Programs etc.) are provided on the following websites:

13.2 Enrolment at the Department and registration for the University's IT services

13.2.1 Enrolment at the Department

The enrolment of first year students takes place in the following way:

Step 1st: The enrolment of first year students takes place electronically, within the last ten days of September, via the system of obligatory electronic matriculation in the website of the Ministry of Education and Religious Affairs (using the Social Security Number ['AMKA']), without the need to appear in person at the University's Departments. The website of the Ministry of Education and Religious Affairs is the following:

Ministry of Education and Religious Affairs
https://eregister.it.minedu.gov.gr/

In this website one will find (a) detailed guidelines concerning the electronic matriculation (Application of Electronic Matriculation, User guide), (b) answers to potential questions (Useful information) and (c) information about the Departments of matriculation (Departments Information).

Step 2nd: The Department of Philosophy website offers immediate and continuous update concerning the submission of relevant documents.

- In this website (1. Secretariat Announcements and 2. Undergraduate Studies → Enrolment of First year students) one will find uploaded all the information regarding the new students (for all the categories of matriculated students), as well as issues of their interest (documents etc.).

Consequently, students are given:

- (i) student ID number ('A.M.') from the Department and
- (ii) guidelines for the acquisition of codes for access to the University's facilities, i.e. the acquisition of a username and password, so that they register to the University's IT services.

13.2.2 Registration for the University's IT services and the acquisition of a University account

After this step students can register for the University's IT services. In this way they obtain identifiers (username and password), which are permanent and ensure access to the system, for as long as their owner maintains the student identity in the Department of Philosophy. From that point onwards, this information is necessary and must be available for the interchange of the student with the IT services of the Department and the N.K.U.A.

- Registration to the University's IT services is mandatory.

The website for acquisition of the codes regarding the University's IT services is the following:

Application for a New Account, Network Operations Center (NOC / "ΚΛΕΙΔΙ") webadm.uoa.gr

Guidelines for the acquisition of codes can be found in the following website:

Guidelines for the acquisition of university account

13.3 University ID card and University Pass

Students submit an application electronically, using the codes they acquired, for the issue of a university ID card, which is also valid as a University pass. The ID card can be used in multiple cases apart from the use as a university pass, and features on its display the exact period of time the student is entitled to a reduced fare in public transportation. All enrolled students are entitled to a university ID card.

Those entitled to a discounted ticket, for the full period of their undergraduate studies, are the ones studying fulltime in the A' Cycle of Studies without having already acquired a BA degree (from a Higher Education Institution), and for as many years as required for the acquisition of the degree according to the indicative programme of studies with the addition of two more years.

• The issue of the University ID card takes place via the Academic Identity Card Online Service of the Ministry of Education and Religious Affairs, and is delivered at the lift-off point selected by the student when submitting his/her application, without any cost. The academic ID card makes the student eligible for discounted tickets in public transportation and discounts in various venues. All students who are entitled to an academic ID can apply electronically in the following websites, especially designed for this purpose.

Academic Identity Card Online Service
www.academicid.minedu.gov.gr
www.submit-academicid.minedu.gov.gr/

13.4 Online Secretariat (“my-studies”)

13.4.1 “my-studies” app

The “my-studies” application gives the following possibilities to undergraduate students:

- to see and/or print their grades, of a specific or of all examinations periods, in one or more modules, or as a whole, on the basis of their successful or unsuccessful attempts,
- to obtain information about every module of the Programme of Studies (ECTS credits, passing grade, teaching hours, module convenor, books etc.),
- to register for the modules they are interested in attending in the following semester and
- to fill in applications for the issue of every possible certificate stipulated by the Secretariat (e.g. confirmation of study, academic transcript etc.).

Information about the online secretariat and guidelines of registration for it are provided in the following websites:

Online Secretariat (“my-studies”)
www.uoa.gr/foitites/ilektronikes_ypiresies/ilektroniki_grammateia/my-studies.uoa.gr

13.4.2 “uniway” app for mobile phones

Additionally, at the disposal of the undergraduate students is the app “uniway” for mobiles, both Android and Apple, where information and micro-applications are provided regarding the students book, the evaluation of modules and social networking.

Information about the “uniway” app for mobiles is provided in the following website:

Application “uniway” for mobiles
www.uoa.gr/foitites/ilektronikes_ypiresies/uniway_efarmogi_gia_kinita/

13.5 Registration for modules and participation in examinations

13.5.1 Obligatory registration for modules

Module registration, in which each student intends to be examined, is obligatory in every semester of studies and is a necessary presupposition in order to:

- participate in the exams during the examination period, and
- acquire the corresponding textbooks from ΕΥΔΟΞΟΣ.

- Participation in the examination of a module is prohibited if: (1) the student has not registered for the course, or (2) if the student failed to meet the deadline for registration.

- The examination grade will not appear in the transcript of a student if (1) the examination of the module was not registered by the student in ‘my-studies’ or (2) the registration period has expired.

13.5.2 Procedure and deadline of module registration

The Department’s Secretariat in the beginning of each semester notifies the students about the specific dates, the way of filling in the relevant registration form and its online submission.

- Module registration takes place through the website <http://my-studies.uoa.gr> within a specific time period announced by the Secretariat. The deadline for module registration are announced at the Department’s website in each semester and are binding for the students.

Information and guidelines for the online module registration are provided in the following website:

Information and guidelines for the module registration
www.uoa.gr/fileadmin/user_upload/PDF-files/FOITITES/eServices/Odigies_Hlektroniki-Dilwsi_Mathimatwn.pdf

13.5.3 Participation in examinations

According to the module registrations they have completed, the students attend the exams in each examination period having with them their academic ID card or other official proof of identity.

13.6 “E-class” (electronic class)

13.6.1 Features

The “e-class” platform (“η-Τάξη” Ε.Κ.Π.Α.) forms a complete Online Modules Management System. It follows the philosophy of open-source software and supports the Asynchronous Remote Education service without restrictions or commitments. Access to this service takes place with the use of a simple web-browser, with no requirement for technical expertise. Connection is achieved with the identifiers of the University account (username and password).

13.6.2 Function

- Every information for each module (content, material for examination, documents/files [supporting teaching], module convenor’s announcements, essay assignments) are uploaded by the module convenors on e-class.
- Every contact (via emails) with the module convenor takes place through e-class.
- Examinations in each module can take place through its specific e-class.

13.6.3 Obligatory registration for “e-class”

Upon the beginning of the semester, students are obliged to register for each module’s e-class and check all the active tools available for each module throughout the semester.

- Attention is required while registering for e-class, since it must correspond to
 - (i) the specific module (with the exact title of the module to be taught) and
 - (ii) the specific code of the module taught in the specific Department – not, e.g., to a similar title and code of module that is taught in another Department.

13.6.4 Examination of the module via “e-class”

The online examination of a module a Department can take place only via

(i) the specific module’s e-class and

(ii) the specific code this module has in the Department it is being taught – and not, e.g., via the e-class of a module with similar title that might be taught in another Department.

13.7 Electronic Course Book Management Service (“Eudoxus” / “Εύδοξος”)

13.7.1 Features of the Service

The Electronic Course Book Management Service (“Eudoxus” / “Εύδοξος”) is a service of the Ministry of Education and Religious Affairs for the immediate and complete provision of the books for the University students. The procedure is fully automated and offers complete information to the students for the provided books for each module including the possibility to immediately receive the books. The website of the Electronic Course Book Management Service is the following:

Electronic Course Book Management Service (“Eudoxus” / “Εύδοξος”)
https://eudoxus.gr/

13.7.2 Declaration of textbooks

The access of students to “Eudoxus” takes place with the use of identifiers (username and password) they acquired while registering for the University online services

- The declaration of textbooks in “Eudoxus” must be preceded by the same corresponding declaration of books in the University’s Online Secretariat System (“my-studies”).

13.8 Transfers

The transfers of students (only for the Departments in which correspondence exists – Government Gazette for correspondences of Departments 2023-2024: 4002/B/22.06.2023) are governed by L. 4962 (Government Gazette 111/A/12.6.2020). They are conducted by the Ministry of Education and Religious Affairs, to which the electronic applications for transfer are submitted within the dates announced by the Ministry. The transfer results are announced by the Ministry (via a message to the person concerned).

13.9 Placement examinations

The placement of graduates in tertiary education takes place according to the stipulations of the relevant legislation. The application and required documents should be submitted from the 1st until the 15th of November of each academic year by the graduates who wish to be placed at an institution of higher education. The placement examinations take place during the period from 1 to 20 December each year. The topics and the material for the placement examinations, as well as the results are announced on the Departments' website (under "Undergraduate Study → Transfers-Placements").

The Department's Assembly decides the semester in which each successful candidate will begin their studies. The modules in which they were examined for their admission are acknowledged as successfully examined ones.

- Information for the placement examinations can be found in the leaflet "Placement Examinations", which is uploaded on the following website:

Leaflet "Placement examinations"

13.11 Traineeship

13.11.1 General information

(α) Characterization

Students beginning their studies from the academic year 2019-2010 onwards can choose to undertake traineeship. Traineeship is a non-obligatory course. It is classified as Compulsory Optional Course (CO), has the course code 73ΦΛΣ250, and is regulated by the “Internal Regulation for Traineeship” of the Department of Philosophy, which specifies also the academic criteria for evaluating the delivered results of traineeship.

(b) Realization and evaluation of traineeship

- Traineeship can be undertaken in a research unit (through NSRF (ΕΣΠΑ), ATLAS or another institution)

(see 4.2 above, especially 4.2.3).

- The credits of practical work are 17 ECTS and the range of marks is 0-10.

Information for practical work is provided by the academic supervisor and the associate academic supervisor of practical work in the Department of Philosophy.

ASSOCIATE ACADEMIC SUPERVISOR OF TRAINEESHIP IN THE DEPARTMENT OF PHILOSOPHY
Assistant Professor Maria Chorianopoulou tel.: +30 210 727 7587, e-mail: mchorian@philosophy.uoa.gr

All information regarding traineeship (such as the Department of Philosophy’s “Internal Regulation of Traineeship”, the advertisement of traineeship, as well as the documents required for applying for traineeship) is provided on the following webpage:

Traineeship
http://www.philosophy.uoa.gr/proptyxiakes-spoydes/ptyxiaki-ergasia-praktiki-askhsh.html

13.11.2 Conducting traineeship

(a) Aims of traineeship

Traineeship aims at the direct connection of the students' theoretical and laboratory-based studies with practical application. More precisely, traineeship aims to

- make students familiar with the production process and improve their understanding of practical issues relating to their education,
- give students an informed orientation with regards to the specializations they could choose in their subsequent scientific development,
- encourage students to take on responsibilities pertaining to the practical field and give them the opportunity to become acquainted with work providers.

(b) Duration of traineeship and requirement for undertaking it

- Traineeship is undertaken during the eighth (8th) semester of study and its duration is two (2) months of full occupation.
- The requirement for undertaking traineeship is that the student must have completed at least two seminars successfully.

(c) Salary/Insurance during the undertaking of traineeship

Traineeship of students in the context of NSRF (ΕΣΠΑ) or ATLAS or other institution: For traineeship exclusively in the context of NSRF (ΕΣΠΑ) or ATLAS or other institution, it has been determined that the institution in which the student undertakes traineeship is responsible: (1) to pay the student a salary of 260 Euros per month, as well as (2) to pay on the student's behalf for an insurance against accident in the workplace.

Information for traineeship via NSRF (ΕΣΠΑ)
https://eclass.uoa.gr/courses/PHILOSOPHY909/

(d) Application for undertaking traineeship

The students of the sixth (6th) semester who are interested in undertaking traineeship during the eighth (8th) semester of their studies (spring semester of the academic year 2024-2025) must submit an application and the required documents to the Department's Secretariat at the beginning of the spring semester of the current academic year (2023-2024), in the week before the start of classes, so that a prompt selection can be made that will fill the places offered to the Department of Philosophy.

- The deadline and the required documents for submitting an application for undertaking traineeship are specified in an announcement made at the beginning of the spring semester and uploaded on the Department's website (under "Undergraduate Study → Traineeship").

14. STUDENT WELFARE: FACILITIES AND SERVICES

14.1 General information

In the website “Facilities and Services” of the N.K.U.A.:

N.K.U.A.’s “Facilities and Services”
www.uoa.gr/el/foitites/paroches_drastiriotes/one will find information about various topics, as well as services and assistance pertaining to the students’ interests and needs, while special care has been taken for vulnerable social groups, such as persons with disabilities and impoverished ones. Students can find information on the following topics:

- AIESEC,
- students with disability,
- academic ID card,
- opportunities for employment,
- University gym,
- University of Athens cultural club,
- student meals,
- housing allowance,
- student’s ombudsman,
- student relief fund,
- student residence,
- scholarships – prizes,
- health service,
- electronic services (Library and Computer and Multimedia Centre, Online Secretariat, digital services [among which: e-mail, connection via a wireless network (Wi-Fi), filling in electronic questionnaires about evaluation], uniway app for mobile phones),
- educational issues (among which: Libraries and Reading Rooms, Foreign Languages Teaching Centre, books) and
- counselling and support services (for topics concerning job orientation and psychosocial problems).

14.2 Volunteerism Service of the Accessibility Unit for Students with Disabilities (ΦμΕΑ)

The Accessibility Unit (ΜοΠρο) has as its goal the practical accomplishment of the equal accessibility to academic studies of students with different abilities and demands, via the provision of adaptations in the environment, assistive informatics technologies and accessibility services. In this context the volunteerism service is significant. The goal of the volunteer support service is the coordination of systematic, discrete and secure assistance of students with disability (ΦμεΑ) by trained classmates regarding issues concerning their studies. Information concerning the ways in which volunteer students can support students with disability, as well as the conditions for participation in the volunteer programme is given in the following websites:

Volunteerism Service of the Accessibility Unit for Students with Disabilities (ΦμεΑ)

- Currently, there are 4 student restaurants in operation. The restaurant in the School of Philosophy serves the students who attend classes at the University Campus. The restaurant is located on the ground floor of the School of Philosophy building, and its' entrance is located on the western side of the building.

14.6 Student Residence

The University of Athens Student Residence (ΦΕΠΑ) consists of 4 buildings, residence halls A, B, C and D, which are located on the University Campus. This was also the location of the old ΦΕΠΑ. On the occasion of the Olympic Games in 2004, building A, the biggest one, was renovated and buildings C and D were constructed. All buildings can accommodate 1064 students in total.

The Residence accepts only students of the University of Athens, as well as students of other Higher and Technical Education Institutions based in the Attica region, who have siblings already living in the Residence. The admissions of new residents take place twice per year. In October – November and in December – January. Their number is determined by the number of vacant beds. The criteria for admission are based on social factors and are described in the Regulations, which contain all the rules regarding residence. The room allocation takes place through a public lottery.
